

Coart Fate to Rest With Trial Jury This Afternoon

In Lengthy Statement,
Former Army Officer
Declares That McNiece
Wrecked His Home.

FIRED AS M'NIECE AROSE, HE TESTIFIES

Pleaded With Wife and School Official to End
Their Relations, Jury Is Told.

BY STAFF CORRESPONDENT.
Talbott, Ga., March 14.—(Special.)—Depositing solely upon his lengthy statement that he had shot Superintendent of Schools A. B. McNiece because the latter had wrecked his home, and upon the eloquence of his counsel, Major Lee H. Coart, charged with murder, will rest his fate with the trial jury early Wednesday afternoon.

Throughout the hearing of evidence today, replete with many sensations, Coart's counsel staged a losing fight in their objections, but opened a strong attack on the state's testimony in its first argument by A. J. Perryman late afternoon. A. P. Persons followed for the state.

Such a long stretch of moments of high tension as come in few trials, held the packed courtroom almost breathless as Coart told how McNiece had taunted him with having been criminally intimate with Mrs. Coart, and how the school official had shouted, just before the fatal shot was fired: "We are going together just as much as we please and you can't stop me!"

Defense Scores.
Coart's statement made a distinct impression on all who heard it. Talking in a calm, even voice, he gradually led to the scene of the shooting in McNiece's office.

"I said: 'McNiece you promised to let my wife alone. You have repeatedly broken your promises and your fraternal oath, and you have ruined my home.'"

"Mr. McNiece said to me, 'Look here, major, what is your game?'"

"I said: 'McNiece, my game is just this: I want to tell you for the last time that you have got to stay away from my wife, my home and cease your criminal relations with her.'"

"He said: 'Well, hereafter your pathway and mine are going to be far apart as possible.'"

"Your pathway and mine, alone," I replied, "are not sufficient, for I tell you right now that if I ever hear of you and my wife being together again or your meeting has been arranged in any way, you are going to suffer the consequences."

"Well," he said with a toss of his head, "I am able to stand the consequences of all my acts, and I asserted, 'It is well that you are; people are linking your names together and it is becoming common talk.'"

Denies Spreading Talk.
"You are responsible for that—going around talking about it to everybody," he stated.

"I have done no such thing," I replied. "I have talked to you, Jim Jordan and John McGehee in confidence, and I know that they are not going to discuss it."

"McNiece then began abusing me and taunting me with the things I had told him in confidence about my wife and get him to be a man and stop what he was doing."

Coart paused for only a moment. He leaned forward in his chair, his eyes fixed on the jury. His hands were clenched. Throughout the courtroom there was a stir and then silence. Coart had almost reached the climax of his statement. His next words would describe the shooting.

"I believe all of those things you have been telling me are a pack of damned lies."

"I said," and Coart almost shouted the words to the jury, "McNiece,"

What Atlanta Must Do

Will Atlanta, a quarter of a century hence, be a beautiful city—the wonder spot of the southeast? Or will it be a dirty, congested place—just a conglomeration of office buildings? The future of the Gate City lies in its plans now and how far it carries them out in the future.

Pay Income Tax Today or Prepare To Face Penalty

Uncle Sam's Customers Find
There Are No Bargain
Rates Offered.

Last Day of Grace.

Taxpayers, beware! This is the last day. Tuesday, city hall, downtown, was crowded every minute of the time the various offices were open to accommodate the public. Every man and every woman was there. It was a cosmopolitan gathering, comprising all races, colors and degrees of station in life. And it was a case of first come, first served. They were all there to make tax returns for the year. Returns may be made at city hall today of city, state and county taxes.

It is the last day to make returns for city taxes, and those who are delinquent will be subject to a penalty. Those who make returns for county and state taxes have until May 1 to do so. After Wednesday, however, these returns should be made at the courthouse.

BY GEORGE MACDONELL.

"Where can I file my income tax return?"

This question has been asked the officials and workers in the office of the internal revenue department in the federal building many thousand times during the last few weeks. In keeping with the spirit of the office, the answer, which has been given a corresponding number of times, has been: "I'll handle it right here."

All the way from the citizen who pays a 4-cent tax, 1-cent down and a penny a quarter, to the man who lays down a return calling for a tax in four figures, they have been thronging the second story of the postoffice building recently in the effort to comply with the rule laid down by Uncle Sam.

Last Day of Grace.
When the sun rose Wednesday morning the last day of grace for individual taxpayers dawned. When the same old goes down sometime in the afternoon there will be many Atlantans who will lean back in an easy chair with a sigh of satisfaction. Others will be figuring their penalties for late returns.

Several little incidents occurred Tuesday that served to keep the day from being dull for the office force in the federal building.

"What is the cheapest return I can fill out?" asked one portly matron.

"Well, they're all pretty expensive," was the answer. "No bargains."

Too Many Exemptions.
One woman wanted to claim too many exemptions. The clerk told her that there would be no way in the world for her to get exemption on her return for a 21-year-old son who had earned his living for the past year. The law would not allow it.

In order to give the public the best service possible, Mr. Rose has been paying postage due on returns sent in without the required number of stamps. For a while the returns of this kind were few, but recently the insufficient postage item has grown to large proportions, so that Mr. Rose is in a quandary.

Somebody in the office suggested that an appropriation be passed by congress to reimburse Mr. Rose.

Tuesday was a busy day in the internal revenue office. A platoon of citizens was lined up against the improvised receiving table in the main office. Atlantans of every sort and description crowded for places in the line.

Some Problems.
At a table, which bore evidence of hard usage, a tired business man was

STRIKE INEVITABLE IN UNION FIELDS, SAYS MINER CHIEF

After President of Coal
Workers Calls on Secretary Davis, He Sees
Walkout Sure.

WORK IN UNION MINES TO STOP APRIL FIRST

Miners Say They Would Negotiate National Contract, But Operators Will Not Consent.

Washington, March 14.—Secretary of Labor Davis and John L. Lewis, president of the United Mine workers, exchanged views today on the threatening situation in the bituminous coal industry, and both were said after their conference to be of the opinion that a national strike in the union fields was inevitable. Mr. Lewis assured Mr. Davis again of the willingness of the miners' union to open negotiations for a new national wage contract, a proposition which mine operators are refusing to entertain.

Later Mr. Lewis declared the cessation of work in the union mines after April 1 was "coming about automatically," and asserted that "a bold commercial policy of the operators for which the public must pay" was in part responsible.

"If there is no conference between the miners' union and the operators," he added, referring to the bituminous situation, "there can be no wage contract drawn up. If there is no wage contract, there won't be any coal dug after April 1, in the union mines."

Mr. Lewis accused mine operators' associations which have sought local conferences with the union looking to the construction of district contracts, of "playing for position" and "shooting propaganda." Operators in certain districts, he insisted, "would like to get an exclusive right to the coal market after April 1, when all other mines are shut up, but could not make wage contracts in the central competitive field," which will determine the wages and costs the competitors have to meet and fix the relationship in the coal market.

Meanwhile, he declared, coal companies can make a lot of money, by refusing to enter conferences, "getting out strike scares and frightening consumers into paying high prices for coal."

He also insisted that district organizations of the miners' union, except in Illinois, were supporting their national officials in demanding the national settlement.

Mr. Lewis came here today from Illinois and after his conference with Secretary Davis, left with several representatives of the national union for New York, where the general sales committee of the union and the anthracite operators are in session to consider terms of a new wage contract.

DAUGHTERY DISAPPOINTED.

Palm Beach, Fla., March 14.—(By the Associated Press.)—Disappointment at the refusal of the operators to meet the coal miners in conference in an effort to make a new contract to replace the one expiring March 31, was expressed today by Attorney-General Daugherty. At the same time

Miners' Demands Are Ludicrous, States Honnold

Authority on Coal Industry
Analyzes Situation Which Threatens Huge Strike.

Editor's Note.—F. C. Honnold, writer of the following article, is one of the best-known authorities on the coal industry in the country. As every indication points to a general walkout of coal miners in the United States and Canada on April 1, his analysis of conditions in the industry is particularly timely. Mr. Honnold is secretary-treasurer of the Illinois Coal Operators' association and writes of the situation from the standpoint of the mine owner.

BY F. C. HONNOLD.

(Written for The Constitution.)
Chicago, March 14.—The situation in the coal industry arises from both extreme radicalism and discord among the leaders of the mine workers' organization. As a result of apparently unavoidable governmental indulgence and general public tolerance during that period, because it was believed that, at least for the time being, everything must yield to war necessity, there has grown up a fixed belief among the miners that the force of economic power, or the so-called strike, is amply adequate to meet any contingency and that through this instrument any excess may be successfully accomplished.

It remains for the public to demonstrate whether or not this is true. The entire number of organized

Property Damage in Many Towns Is Heavy, as
Winds Raze All Before Them.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New Orleans, March 14.—At least 23 persons were killed and many others were seriously injured as a result of a series of storms at places reaching proportions of tornadoes, which visited isolated sections of Louisiana, Mississippi, Arkansas and Oklahoma last night and early today.

The heaviest loss of life reported was at Gowan, Okla., a village 15 miles east of McAlester, where 12 persons were killed when a tornado swept through the foreign section of the village last night. Many others were slightly injured.

Six negroes were killed when the storm passed through the northeastern section of Jefferson county and the southeastern section of Lenoire county, Arkansas, early today. The storm in this section left a trail of wrecked buildings for 20 miles. Several were slightly injured here, none seriously.

Two Hundred Homes.
At Sulphur, Okla., two white men, Thomas Atkins, 60, a carpenter, and Virgil Hampton, 70, were killed late yesterday. Nineteen others were seriously injured and scores suffered slight injuries. Property damage here is estimated at $100,000. Fifty buildings were completely demolished and 200 people left homeless are being cared for in residences which escaped the path of the tornado.

Eight homes were demolished at Sunrise, a village two miles north of Baton Rouge, La., and a negro woman and her child were killed. Four others were slightly injured there early today.

Twenty-five persons were injured, a number seriously, when the storm struck Corinth, Miss., today. More than 150 homes were leveled. The storm swept a path more than 100 feet wide, razing every building in its path. Reports from outlying districts tell of considerable property damage. A school building in which were 1,000 children barely escaped the path of the storm.

Houses Destroyed.
An aged negro man was killed and several negroes were slightly injured, a score of houses were destroyed at Arkansas City, Ark., early today.

Two homes were destroyed and one man was injured near Alexandria, La., when the storm passed there last night.

Only meager details are available from the sections visited by the storm on account of the damage to wire communication and it is feared the death toll will be greatly increased when complete returns are available. Little efforts have been made to estimate the property damage, which in addition to destroyed homes and other buildings, include damage to crops and destruction of live stock. Rivers and smaller streams in practically all the sections visited by the storm, which was accompanied by heavy rains, are swollen and some apprehension is felt on this score.

The storm was accompanied by the usual freaks, the most outstanding of Vernon Horn, 6 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. G. Horn, died Tuesday evening from a fracture of the skull at the Davis-Fischer sanitarium a few minutes after he had been struck by an automobile driven by S. L. Watters, 41 years old, who gave his address as 35 West DeKalb avenue.

Call Officers Mashburn and Bulard, who went to the scene of the accident, near the Horn boy's home, arrested Watters on a charge of reckless driving. Bond was fixed at $2,500. Watters said he is a carpenter.

In the car with Watters at the time of the accident were his father and a negro named Robert Davis. Police were told that Watters was driving at a reasonable rate of speed when the boy ran into the street in front of the car. The boy ran in front of the car from behind an ice wagon, witnesses said.

The child was taken to the sanitarium in the automobile of another man, who stopped at the time of the accident and offered his services.

DISASTROUS FIRE RAGES IN CHICAGO; CITY BLOCKS BURN

Chicago, March 15.—Fire starting in the Austin building at South Canal street and West Jackson boulevard shortly after midnight spread rapidly and at 1:30 a. m. the entire block bounded by Canal, Vanburen and Clinton streets and Jackson boulevard was reported burning.

The flames were fanned by a high wind. An hour after the fire started calls for special apparatus will were being rung in. The district is largely made up of wholesale houses and loft buildings.

The Burlington building, in which are some of the offices of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy railroad caught fire, and many night employees were driven out. The Metropolitan west side elevated structure was burning the length of a block. The intense heat drove firemen back and a number of small manufacturing concerns were burned before there could be an organized effort to check the fire.

Shirley T. High, city fire attorney, said the fire gave indications of being the worst in Chicago in years.

Washington, March 14.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Representative Charles H. Brand, of the eighth Georgia district, introduced in congress today a resolution requiring and directing the United States department of agriculture, through the bureau of markets, to make an immediate investigation in regard to the feasibility of supplying the farmers in the cotton-growing states with daily radiophone reports of the market prices of cotton, particularly during the season when cotton is being harvested and marketed.

The resolution also directs the radio division bureau of engineering, navy department, to furnish the department of agriculture as information for the purpose of making this investigation, a statement of the manner and means by which the market prices of cotton may be furnished to the farmers by radio reports and what would be necessary for the different cities and towns, as well as individuals, in the cotton-growing states to do and what it will cost to provide the equipment necessary for receiving such reports.

SOLDIERS' BONUS MEASURE IS NOW BEFORE CONGRESS

After Hearing Mellon,
Harding and Cressinger,
Committee Reports Bill
Favorably Tuesday.

OFFICIALS DISAGREE IN OPINIONS ON BILL

Measure Provides Certificates With Loan Value at Banks, and Cash Up to $50.

BY JOHN GLEISSNER,
United News Staff Correspondent.

Washington, March 14.—The soldier bonus bill is now before the house of representatives. Leaders expect to pass it Monday, under a suspension of the rules. This means no amendments will be permitted and that there cannot be more than forty minutes' debate.

The bill was reported favorably late Tuesday by the ways and means committee, after conflicting testimony had been heard from Secretary Mellon, W. D. Cressinger, comptroller of the currency, and W. P. G. Harding, governor of the federal reserve board. The committee ignored the threat of a presidential veto and the advice of Secretary Mellon.

Provides Certificates.
The bill, as reported, provides for the issuance of adjusted service certificates to veterans, computed at the rate of $1 daily for domestic service and $1.25 daily for overseas service, plus 25 per cent. The certificates mature in 20 years and bear a 1-2 per cent interest, compounded.

Between now and October 1, 1925, they can be utilized as collateral for loans at banks, up to 50 per cent of their face value. After that, they have a loan value with the government of 85 per cent of their face value.

Veterans entitled to less than $50 will receive cash.

The bill also provides for assistance in purchasing homes, acquiring farms, or taking vocational training. The veteran may take his choice of any of the plans.

Vote 19 to 6.

The committee vote on reporting the bill was 19 to 6. Opposing it were representatives Treadway, of Massachusetts, and Tilson, of Connecticut, republicans, and Representatives Garner, of Texas; Collier, of Mississippi, and Kitchin, of North Carolina, democrats. Kitchin is ranking minority member on the committee; he voted by proxy.

After hearing the treasury testimony, the committee altered the bill so that the loan certificates may be redemmed by banks at other banks, but redemmed at federal reserve banks was prohibited. This resulted from the statement of Comptroller Cressinger that if the certificates were redeemable, much of his opposition would be removed, and from the objection of Governor Harding to having large sums of unfluid paper concentrated in the twelve reserve banks. The effect of the change will permit the smaller or overloaded banks to dispose of their certificates with the larger financial institutions, while reserve banks are protected.

Different Views.
Considerable difference of opinion among the treasury officials was developed at the hearing. Secretary Mellon thought that loans under the certificate plan would embarrass banks as well as the government. Governor Harding thought the loans that might be made would not prove burdensome to banks. Comptroller Cressinger thought that they would. Cressinger did not want large amounts of non-negotiable paper in the national

By Rejection of Versailles

BY JAMES A. HOLLIMON,
Constitution Bureau,
Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, March 14.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—There is no mistaking the strained international relations that have been evolved out of the demand of the United States for $241,000,000 as this government's share of the expense of occupying the Rhine country. The government of France professes to accept it as an unfriendly act while the other allies take the position that all governmental rights date from the ratification of the treaty of Versailles, which this government helped to make, but subsequently repudiated, though a treaty in good faith between the victors in the world's greatest war looking not only to a just and equitable participation in reparations but to the future amity of the world.

Whether or not this government will be forced to take an official seat at the approaching reparations and international economic conference at Gans, in order to protect her interests, as has been intimated, is of little significance in comparison to her unenviable position with regard to the nations of the world brought about by failing to keep faith with her allies in acceptance of the Versailles treaty, the first test of that position being now shown in the consensus of official European opinion regarding America's occupation demand. As it is this government's demand has little or no likelihood of ever being met without menacing international complications.

Where U. S. Lost.
The whole fact in a nutshell is that America lost all for which she fought in 1917 and 1918 by a failure to ratify some kind of an international treaty with her comrades in war, and as a further result is in the most dangerous international position she has ever been in, the recent disarmament conference to the contrary notwithstanding.

That the recent demand for the payment of America's occupation expenses is a just one, as dollars and cents go, is admitted.

On November 11, 1918, Germany signed an undertaking with a group of governments to bear the expense of maintaining their armies on her soil. The United States was in that group.

Vote of 55 to 30 Shows
That Opposition Lacks
Only Few of Enough to Reject Treaty.

TWO-THIRDS VOTE
NEEDED TO RATIFY

26 Democrats Voted for Reservation, While Four,
Including Underwood,
Support Treaty.

Washington, March 14.—The vote in the senate on the proposed Robinson amendment to the four-power Pacific treaty has confirmed belief that the decision on ratification will be extremely close.

While not conclusive, the vote revealed the extent of the opposition to the pact. The amendment was rejected, late Tuesday, 55 to 30.

Since only a majority was required, the defeat of the amendment was overwhelming.

But to ratify the treaty, two-thirds is required, and the 30 votes in support of the amendment indicate the opposition lacks only a few votes to accomplish rejection. Counting probable absences on the final vote, it is likely that not more than 31 votes will be needed to prevent ratification and undo the entire work of the arms conference.

Leaders Confident.

However, some of those senators who supported the amendment will in the final vote for the treaty itself. Leaders lost none of their confidence that ratification as things now stand is assured, although by a narrow margin.

The roll call showed: Twenty-six democrats voting in favor of the amendment. Four republicans supporting them. Four democrats voting with the republicans.

The four republicans who deserted their leadership were Borah, Johnson, La Follette and France. The three democrats who joined with their leader, Senator Underwood, in opposing the amendment were Pomeroy, Randall and Williams.

Second Rejected.
The Robinson amendment would have provided for the participation of other powers than the four that signed the treaty in conferences called under its terms. The senate also rejected a similar amendment offered by Walsh, of Montana, as a substitute; the vote was 50 to 37 on this.

Senator Underwood, the democratic leader, failed to show the strength that had been expected. Before the roll was called, Underwood made a speech in the nature of a plea, although he emphasized that in advocating the treaty he was not acting in his capacity as leader of the minority. Several democrats voted for ference," said McCumber, "is that the potential power of human conscience and the sense of justice and right are assured free and full expression."

Lenroot predicted that if the treaty is defeated the companion treaties will be withdrawn and Harding will seek a popular mandate in November. He denied there is an alliance.

"Rejection of these treaties will mean war sooner or later," said Lenroot, "probably a war that will inevitably involve the United States."

Women Protest Virtue as Male And Female Vice

New York, March 14.—New York city women and leaders in civic affairs today sent out what may prove to be a feminine battle cry against Sculptor Frederick MacMonnies' depiction of "Civic Virtue," as a nude young man enthusiastically kicking the prostrate form of two women, representative of urban temptation and vice.

Protest was voiced by Mary Garrett Hay and Mrs. James Lee Laidlaw, champion of woman's rights, at the announcement that the MacMonnies sculpture was about completed and was soon to be erected in City Hall park. The money for the monument to "Civic Virtue" was left to the city in the term of Mayor McClellan's administration.

Mr. MacMonnies has depicted the spirit of his theme as an onward marching youth, a mighty club slung across his busy shoulders, sprouting with either foot a recumbent and alluring female, symbolic of all that isn't nice in civic aspiration.

"I think it is a trifle ridiculous," Miss Hay declared. "Perhaps the true symbolism lies in the fact that 'Civic Virtue' is depicted as naked. That strikes one as reasonable after thinking of what civic virtue has had to undergo from the city hall politicians. No wonder the poor thing hasn't any clothes."

"Why should MacMonnies have used a male figure trampling down tempting women? Why not represent civic virtue as a man and woman hand-in-hand mounting confidently and happily a difficult path?"

Mrs. Laidlaw agreed with Miss Hay.

"Women stand with men," she said. "The spirit of the times, it seems to me, is against a discrimination, symbolic or otherwise."

Widow Is Defended By 18-Year-Old Son In Home-Brew Case

Lynn, Mass., March 14.—When the case of Mrs. Dora Cornitz, charged with making home brew, was called in district court here Tuesday, a slender youth with a dignified face arose and in quavering tones announced himself as her counsel.

Then the boy, his eyes blazing, launched into a dramatic defense of the gray-haired woman. She was a widow, he told the court, who was struggling to earn enough to feed and clothe her five children and to give them a good education. She made home brew and sold it, he admitted, as a means of earning money for her little brood.

Tragedy was written in the youth's face when he turned to the defendant and began to examine her. His voice broke, he recovered himself and continued until the woman broke down and sobbed. He put his arm around her and tried to soothe her.

Spectators thought it was a good show—this youth with the tragic manner and gestures dramatic. Time and again they laughed until the court rapped for order.

Standing beside the woman the boy made his final argument.

"Your honor," he said, "this case is a little different, that is—well she's my mother."

The spectators listened in silence while the judge announced that Mrs. Cornitz just pay a fine of $75.

The youthful counsel was Samuel Cornitz, 18, a student at Boston University Law school.

Old Dental Weapons Prove Fortitude of Forefathers

Above: L. R. Thompson, senior of the Atlanta-Southern Dental college, is shown reluctantly opening his mouth to the more or less tender ministrations of O. D. Rockley, a fellow classman, who is proceeding to bore out a cavity of an aching molar with the tender little instrument shown in the photograph. It was a marvel of dental equipment a century ago. Today it shows a marked resemblance to the carpenter's brace and bit.

Below: The prize of the collection of Dr. P. T. Dashwood, curator of the Atlanta-Southern Dental college's museum. It is the equipment of an old-time dentist. The instruments are all of inlaid ivory. The mirrors are of hand-carved ivory, and they are all brightly jeweled. Today they are still beautiful as to workmanship, but considered entirely too ponderous and unsanitary for practical use.

To the Right: Some ancient instruments of torture used by dentists of a hundred or so years ago. The long, punishing forceps, the drill working on a tiny ratchet and the terrible "twister," which seized the tooth and furnished a leverage by which the recalcitrant molar was actually twisted out of the mouth, give some idea of the pleasures of a visit to the dentist in the olden days.

It is a human failing or a human attribute that men are inclined to look on their forebears as persons of sterner stuff than the men and women of the present age of shower baths and talcum powder. We all like to think of grandfathers as he stalked along with cocked rifle resting in his arm pit, scouting ahead of the can-sterner stuff is there—visible, tangible, overwhelmingly impressive.

Goose Flank Starts Up.

For instance, Dr. E. T. Dashwood, the curator of the museum, who is largely responsible for the collection, will show you a tooth drill that causes goose flesh to start up instantaneously, and it will take presence of mind to choke down the scream that leads to your lips.

Back about the rack, the thumbpins, and those other gentle little appliances of the Spanish inquisition, they were as soothing as a mother's kiss to the most modern of these dental drills, running with all the smoothness and silence of electricity, isn't just exactly what any normal person wants roving about the mouth.

But suppress your shudder for just a few seconds, and imagine how it would feel to have a strong-armed dentist excavating a tooth with a delicate little instrument that closely resembles the brace and bit of the journeyman carpenter of today.

Chest Furnished Pressure.

Dr. Dashwood explains more or less naively that the old-time dentist rested this instrument on his chest, guided the drill against the proper tooth with his left hand and then ground away with his right. And all that in the days before anesthesia was heard.

Then for your edification and to permit you to give thanks that you live in a more enlightened if less hardy age, he produces for your inspection a more delicate drill. It is likewise a hand affair, but is considerably smaller than the chest drill and came on in a much later and probably less stern period. This delicate drill works on a ratchet principle. The drill was placed against the tooth and the hand, exerting pressure, caused the ratchet to work and the drill to penetrate the tooth, that is if the patient happened to be strapped down firmly enough.

Probably the most primitive of all the instruments in the collection is a set of "twisters." The name accurately describes the function of the weapon. It can hardly be described as delicately made. In physical appearance the "twister" is closely akin to the cork-screw, another instrument that is rapidly becoming obsolete.

In the old days, the dentist, who was usually a blacksmith or practiced some other kind of art, placed the "twister" over the affected tooth, allowed its claw to take a firm and enduring hold about the tooth where it joins the gum, and then using all the leverage in his power, fairly twisted the tooth from the head, it being the custom that the head generally was supposed to remain on the shoulders during the operation.

Then there are later instruments, such as elongated forceps that show that the dental art was still allied with the village smithy and give us a glorified respect for the courage and endurance of our forebears and the physical prowess of the dentists of those days.

One of the pets of the Atlanta-Southern museum is an ornate set of dental instruments of a much later—practically a modern period—that evidently belonged to a dentist of tremendous wealth and reputation. All of his instruments are of hand-carved ivory, rhinoceros horn ivory at that. The carving is the art word in delicacy, but the instruments could hardly be described with that adjective. They are unusually large and formidable looking, typical instruments of a stern and unforgetting age, and the fact that brilliant jewels decorate the ivory handles of each one of them would hardly encourage a dental patient of today in making to the dentist for his ministrations. The tracery in the ivory might be pretty to look at, but the dentist and his barborage for all manner of pains that the dentist of today so sedulously guards against.

Members of the faculty of Atlanta-Southern dental college take a pride in these old instruments, not only as historical curiosities but as an object lesson in the advance of dental surgery.

It is pointed out that the tremendous growth in the importance attached to the care of the teeth is directly proportionate to the diminution in the dread that the body politic feels in entering the dental office.

With modern instruments and all the aids of anesthesia, the dental chair has been robbed of its terrors and with the passing of dread, the people have become mentally attuned to seeing the dentist not as a giver of pain but a reliever of suffering.

For instance, figures of the Atlanta-Southern dental college show that since the opening of the session in October 1,500 more people attended the clinic at the school than over a similar period last school year, an increase of 33.13 per cent.

And as familiarity with the importance of the teeth grows, so grows general health conditions.

ACCIDENTAL DEATH VERDICT RETURNED

Lyerly, Ga., March 14.—(Special.) A verdict of having met his death by the accidental discharge of a shotgun which he carried on a duck hunt, was returned by the coroner's jury investigating the cause of death of Thomas Morris, young man of Menlo, who was found dead, with the top of his head torn off, Saturday afternoon.

GOVERNOR WILL LET CONDEMNED MAN DIE

Nashville, Tenn., March 14.—Governor Taylor today indicated that he would not interfere in behalf of Maurice Mays, Knoxville negro, under sentence to die tomorrow for the alleged murder of Mrs. Bertie Lindsey, a tragedy which led to the riots there three years ago.

If any mistake has been made," said Governor Taylor in a long statement reviewing the case, "it has been made by the higher and lower courts, and two juries of Tennessee."

and otherwise co-operate with the United States department of agriculture in working out a plan whereby such radio reports for cotton farmers may be furnished them.

The department of agriculture was directed to make report of its investigation and findings in regard to furnishing such radio reports, with such recommendations as it may see fit to submit, within thirty days from the passage of the resolution.

Judge Brand stated tonight that a system is already in operation in the west whereby market news is distributed to farmers by radiophone and that in January of this year New York city began sending out twice a day radiophone news of wholesale markets. Arrangements to serve the farmers of New York, New Jersey and eastern Pennsylvania have already been completed, said Judge Brand, between the state department of farming and markets and the Westinghouse Manufacturing company, and under this system the farmers of the regions specified will receive market and crop estimates news the same as by direct telephone. Market conditions for eastern agricultural products in the big wholesale centers will be compared at least three days a week.

TO OPEN GEORGIA MOUNTAIN REGION

Begin Work Soon on Last Links of Georgia Highway to North Carolina Line.

Work of constructing the last unfinished links in the state highway from Atlanta to the North Carolina line a few miles north of Blairsville is now under way, and by the spring of 1923 tourists will be able to make the trip from Atlanta to Asheville, N. C., over a highway first class in every respect and paved a greater portion of the way, according to announcement made by W. R. Neel, state highway engineer.

Funds for completion of the highway between Cleveland and Blairsville on the Atlanta-Gainesville route, and from Dahlonega to the Union county line on the Atlanta-Cumming-Dahlonega route are now available, and the work will be completed as soon as possible. Under favorable conditions Mr. Neel expects both routes to be completed in 1923.

Carolina System.
The state of North Carolina has completed a splendid highway system from Asheville to the Georgia-North Carolina line between Murphy, N. C., and Blairsville, Ga. The Georgia highway department will have completed the highway from Atlanta to Cleveland in White county this year. The stretch of road from Cleveland to Blairsville is 26 miles long and this will form the final connecting link in the highway system. This stretch of the highway circles around Blood mountain, one of the highest peaks of the Blue Ridge mountains, and when completed will pass through a section of rare scenic beauty. This highway project is one of the most important ever attempted by the state highway department, according to Mr. Neel. The counties of Union, Lumpkin and White are co-operating in the work and are devoting as much money as possible to the enterprise. State and federal aid money will be used also in the work.

Under the plan of the department, two branches of the highway will be finished as soon as possible. This will allow motorists to go from Atlanta to Asheville by one route and return by another, both of surpassing beauty.

Roads to Join.
The Atlanta-Dahlonega route runs from Atlanta to Roswell, Alpharetta, Cumming, Dawsonville and Dahlonega. The Atlanta-Gainesville route runs from Atlanta to Decatur, Lawrenceville, Buford, Gainesville and Cleveland. The road from Dahlonega to Blairsville will come together at the Union county line below Blairsville, and from thence on to Murphy will form a single highway. The highway in Lumpkin, Union and White counties will pass through a section which is 1,000 feet higher than Asheville, N. C. At Blairsville the new highway will be crossed by a road leading from Rabun county to Ellijay and Blue Ridge, which will provide a system of roads through the Blue Ridge mountains of Georgia 250 miles in length. These roads will traverse what is known as "The Little Switzerland of the South," and will afford tourists an opportunity for the first time to visit this beautiful section in their own automobiles in a few hours. Heretofore this section has been accessible only because of lack of roads of any kind.

Atlanta Important Point.
Atlanta will become an important point on the highway as tourists from south Georgia and Florida will come first to this city to make the trip over either branch of the highway. It also will place Atlanta on a direct line between Asheville, N. C., and Florida and will bring many tourists here who have heretofore been making the trip from North Carolina to Florida by way of the Atlantic seaboard.

Secretary of State S. G. McLeander is now working on a plan to have a part of the Blue Ridge mountain section set aside by the government as a national recreational park. The government owns hundreds of thousands of acres of land in northern Georgia which it purchased for conservation and park purposes. The federal government builds its own highways in its national parks, and Mr. McLeander is seeking to have the government officially declare this section a recreational park so that federal money will be available for road construction and improvement in this region.

By July 1, 1922, good roads will have been completed between Atlanta and Dahlonega, both by way of Cumming and by way of Gainesville, and tourists can reach many beautiful spots in the Blue Ridge without trouble after July. By the spring of 1923 they will be able to make the trip over splendid roads all the way through to Asheville.

Mr. Neel said money is now available for the work and it will be pushed to completion.

JAPAN WELCOMES HER, BUT NOT TALK ON BIRTH CONTROL

Mrs. Margaret Sanger.

Mrs. Margaret Sanger, head of the Birth Control league, recently applied for a passport at San Francisco for Japan. The Japanese officials, acting on advice from Tokyo, informed Mrs. Sanger that she would be welcome in their country but would not be allowed to disseminate any birth control propaganda there as that would be against the Japanese laws. Baroness Kaikichi Ishimoto of the Voluntary Motherhood League of Japan invited Mrs. Sanger.

Seen and Heard in Washington

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON

Washington, March 14.—(Special.) The congressional campaign committee of both the major parties are hard at work—principally trying to raise money.

I have been impressed with the remarkable candor that Chairman Riddick, of the republican committee, has expressed in the appeals for funds that he is sending out.

For instance, the assurance promised those solicited that their replies "will be brought to the attention of party leaders, who will be appreciative of a favorable response," can only be interpreted one way, and it is perhaps the boldest suggestion of the "bribe and sale policy" of the republican party that has yet been broadcast through the mails.

If the solicited individual refuses to contribute he is to be told that he should seek patronage or congressional favor.

If it should happen to be a special interest in matters of national legislation then in course the door is open and the invitation extended for further negotiations.

It doesn't take a Philadelphia lawyer to spot the significance of that remarkable sentence.

I find, judging from my own correspondence, that there is a great deal of confusion in the public mind as to what the various treaties now before the senate really mean.

During the recent international disarmament conference there were so many columns of dry, technical and almost nonsensical material authorized by the official newspaper releases, that the average reader passed them up as too hard to digest.

Since that time the debate has been served to make distinctive and clear the real objects to be sought by the several factions.

Let me condense into as few words as possible the recommendations of the conference to the governments participating—

To scrap any existing capital ships and start building new ones—a five-power, fifteen-year treaty.

United States—To be scrapped, 845,737 tons; to be retained, 580,450 tons; permanent after ten years, 525,000 tons.

Great Britain—To be scrapped, 583,375 tons; to be retained, 301,320 tons; permanent after ten years, 525,000 tons.

Japan—To be scrapped, 298,100 tons; to be retained, 301,320 tons; permanent after ten years, 313,000 tons.

To continue the navy ratio indefinitely until two years after the treaty has been denounced by one of the five powers concerned.

To limit the caliber of guns on naval vessels to 16 inches.

To condemn absolutely all poison gas warfare.

To condemn the use of submarines as commerce destroyers.

To enact a four-power, ten-year peace treaty regarding all island possessions in the Pacific.

To stop building naval bases on specified islands in the western Pacific.

To enact a permanent treaty between nine powers for just, fair and friendly treatment of China.

To confer together whenever any power feels that threatening difficulties are developing in regard to China.

To establish a commission of the five powers to deal with alleged infringements of the "open door" agreements.

To return Shantung completely to China.

Important agreements reached outside the conference:

To settle the Yau cable dispute.

To settle the question of American rights in Japanese "mandates" on the Pacific.

To return Shantung completely to China.

Congressman John Smithwick, of the Pensacola district, is back at his congressional duties completely recovered from the wounds he received as one of the more fortunate victims of the memorable Knickerbocker tragedy.

Smithwick, who, by the way, is a native Georgian and a brother-in-law of State Democratic Chairman Vereen, was the only member of the house of representatives in the ill-fated theater at the time of the collapse.

He was in the rear of the gallery, and this probably was responsible for his escape. He had been seated on the front row, but the individual who sat next to him had a severe bronchial cough, and Smithwick purposely retired to the rear, just a moment before the collapse, in order to get away from such close contact with the coughing patron.

When the gallery pitched forward those on the seat from which the congressman had moved were killed or severely wounded.

Another feature of the special Providence that seemed to have protected the Florida member that night was the eleventh-hour decision of Mrs. Smithwick and her children to leave the company that night, due to the snowstorm raging.

The members of the family had prepared to go, the theater being within a block of their apartments, but after getting to the door, with wraps on, they suddenly decided the weather was too bad. So Smithwick went alone, and the story is one of the best good fortune.

There is no man in congress more actively attentive to his official duties than this little red-headed son of the west coast of the Peninsular State.

He never misses a roll call unless providentially prevented, and takes the keenest pleasure in doing the small things as well as the big things that crowd into the demands upon a representative's time. I heard Charlie Barrett, president of the National Farmers' union, make the statement the other day that in all his fifteen years in close contact with congressmen from every state of the union, he never knew one more genuinely interested in his work, or more active in the interest of his constituency than Smithwick, of Florida.

Here's hoping that a kind Providence may continue to protect him!

The remarkable statement has just been made that the bureau of internal revenue is so swamped with work in excess of its proven capacity to handle, that income taxes as far back as 1917 and 1918 have not been audited, thus leaving a Damocles sword, so to speak, hanging above the heads of thousands of business men and business interests in this country.

There can be no definite economic reconstruction in America so long as there are so many uncertainties as what demands by the government will be exacted of the people, especially of those people who enter into the commercial, industrial and financial life of the nation.

There can be no definite planning, no prescribed program upon which to bank and build as long as business men are unable to get any intelligent idea as to what their federal taxes will be, or how the government "expects"—God forgive the misnomer—in most cases—will construe this or that, and so on.

The uncertainty of federal taxation has, in fact, been as perilous to post-war developments as the burdens of heavy taxation—perhaps more so.

Great industrial corporations have been forced to close the doors of the factories and shelve thousands of workers upon the streets because of errors in Washington bureaus, or because of the "sluggish" of reviewing the senate aisle. Few republicans have enjoyed the keen friendship of democratic colleagues, as did the lowan.

Smart, alert, broad-minded and long-voiced, he was one of the G. O. P. leaders whose battles were always fought in the interest of the masses, for he didn't give a continental damn whether his position on any subject was orthodox or to party creeds or not. He thought and spoke and voted as a representative of a state constituency, and not as the cog in a political machine.

He was the leader of the farm bloc in the senate, in spite of the bitter fight upon that alliance by the president and his spokesmen on the floor.

And yet the president honored him with a judgeship because he recognized his great ability as a lawyer, his fitting temperament and his worth as a fair, honest and dependable man.

Iowa has had some big men in the senate—Allison, Dolliver, Cummings, Kenyon. They were all from time to time mentioned for president.

Dolliver died too young. He was one of the greatest of American orators, in my judgment.

Cummings, who is the present senior senator, has been governor of his state, and a national figure for many years.

Lavish Hindu Display.

(P. W. Wilson, in World's Work.) The glories of the Grand Mogul when he reigned in Delhi are fact, not fable. There you may still see his palace, with the Pearl Mosque and the Diwan-i-Khas or Hall of Audience, the roof of which was once silver foliage, encrusted with gold, and valued by the emperor at 27,000,000 francs.

In Delhi, too, you would have found the Throne of the Two Peacocks, whose expanded tails were illuminated with sapphires, rubies, emeralds, pearls and other precious stones of appropriate colors: a throne of gold, based on six golden and bejeweled feet. That India is a civilization has never been in doubt.

The retirement of Senator Kenyon, of Iowa, who has wrapped the toga for the black gown of a federal judgeship, has caused genuine sorrow among his colleagues on both sides of

The recent wedding after a whirlwind courtship of Peggy Udell, Milwaukee girl and musical comedy star, to John W. Montgomery, scion of a wealthy Bellefonte, Pa., family, attracted nationwide attention. They were married following a party at which they became acquainted.

Peggy says that Montgomery is planning to sue her for divorce.

How English View Debt.

(From The Manchester Guardian Weekly.)

The passage of the foreign debt refunding bill through the United States senate leaves only a few minor points for adjustment. When these have been settled we may shortly expect the arrival of the American commission, which is to arrange the terms on which European governments are to repay, with interest, the American war loans advanced to them. The negotiations will be worth watching. So far as this country is concerned, there should be little difficulty, since we are fully prepared to pay, but most of the other debtor nations have taken their liberties with strange lightheartedness. Perhaps we have set them a bad example. The continent owes us more than it owes the United States, but we have encouraged the tacit understanding that we were not going to stand harshly on our legal rights. The American farmer, who is less intimately acquainted than we are with the bareness of the European cupboard, is naturally less complainant about seeing several million of good American dollars written off as worthless.

Neither the lion nor the tiger is equal in muscular power to the bear, and neither the polar and the grizzly are the strongest.

Jacksonville, Florida, January 17, 1922.

This is to certify that under our personal observation the lubricating system and crank case of a Studebaker Special Six Touring car, in which Oildag had been used, was completely drained and the car was driven from 904 Main street to Forsyth, west on Forsyth to Broad, over the viaduct and out Riverside to the Florida Country Club in Ortega and return, a distance of 15.5 miles. Five passengers were carried. At the end of the run the motor was cool and running in perfect condition. Evidently the friction was practically eliminated to enable the motor to perform this extraordinary feat. The oil plug was left out during the run.

This is to certify that under our personal supervision, the lubrication system and crank case of a Studebaker Special Six Touring in which Oildag had been used was completely drained and the car was driven from the Herald office at 36 West Flagler street to Hialeah and return, a distance of 15.9 miles. Five persons were carried.

At the end of the run, the engine was cool and running in perfect condition. Evidently the surfaces of the cylinder wall, pistons and bearings must have been practically frictionless to enable the motor to perform this extraordinary feat.

Read This Proof

Facsimile reproductions of affidavits of disinterested parties, referring to the dry runs listed below have been carefully examined by me. (Signed) O. J. Willoughby, Automobile Editor, The Atlanta Constitution.

Tampa, Fla., 15.6 miles.
 St. Louis, Mo., 15.5 miles.
 Chicago, Ill., 17.2 miles.
 Brooklyn, N. Y., 15.9 miles.
 Boston, Mass., 16.7 miles.
 Milwaukee, Wis., 26.7 miles.
 Indianapolis, Ind., 18.9 miles.

In addition to these runs, records of more than twenty other successful dry runs on file at the offices of the local Oildag distributors, have been examined by me and are authentic.

The Studebaker car used in Jacksonville and Miami was also used in Tampa and for the run in Atlanta. All of these runs were made during the past fifty-six days, and the car was driven less than 2,000 miles in the meantime.

These tests are made from time to time to convincingly prove that graphoid surfaces are formed by the consistent use of Oildag and are not made to advocate running without Oildag.

This Test Was Also Made in Atlanta Tuesday

We announced on Monday that we would run a Studebaker car under its own power, with full passenger load, 15 miles with the crank case and bearings dry—that not a drop of lubricant would be used during the trip.

This run was made Tuesday afternoon before a committee of business and scientific men. The same car was used on this run as used on the three runs made in Florida and certified to above. The crank case was drained in the presence of a number of persons present. The plug was not replaced in the crank case. The car was driven out Peachtree to Buckhead, a distance of six miles, without a drop of oil before any weakness of any kind was evident.

Frankly, this mileage was disappointing.

Of more than forty dry runs made during the past year, this is the first time that less than fourteen miles was made, easily and without the motor developing any weakness whatever.

Another Dry Run Will Be Made In Atlanta Soon

Within a short time we will announce the time and place of another dry run, with a car previously lubricated with Oildag. We wish to have every car and truck owner in Atlanta witness this run, as conclusive proof that the deflocculated graphite which Oildag contains is adsorbed to the cylinder walls and crank shaft bearings, and that the graphoid surface will lubricate the car during 15 or more miles of driving at usual touring speed.

NEGRO ASSAILANT SOUGHT BY POSSE

Wrightsville, Ga., March 14.—(Special.)—Over 500 men tonight have surrounded a swamp near here in which they believe a strange negro, who this afternoon attacked a prominent young widow, slashing her clothes, pouring kerosene over her body and then setting fire to her, is hiding.

The attack occurred near Kite, as the young woman was cutting green plants along the roadside. The negro demanded money, using a revolver and clutching her around the throat to prevent an alarm. After threatening to kill her and her small child, the negro slashed her clothes with a knife, then poured kerosene over and set it ablaze. Just as aid arrived, the young woman slashed the negro's throat with a knife with which she had been cutting plants. The negro fled as the woman's younger brother approached. The woman fell into a pool of water to extinguish the flames, and her father and brother arrived on the scene. Bloodhounds from two counties were secured immediately by the posse and the chase started.

HELD ON SERIOUS CHARGE, SPARTA MAN GIVEN BAIL

Sparta, Ga., March 14.—(Special.)—Judge James E. Park at an ex parte hearing in Madison Tuesday afternoon granted bail of $2,000 to James M. Phillips, prominent live stock dealer and business man of Sparta, charged with criminal assault on a young white girl said to be under the age of consent.

Opposing Treaty Watson Attacks British and Japs

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMAN, Constitution Bureau, Raleigh Hotel.

Washington, March 14.—(By Constitution Leased Wire.)—Senator Thomas E. Watson, of Georgia, whose position against the ratification of the four-power treaty is consistent with his pre-election and subsequent utterances, made a strong address in the senate this afternoon not only against ratification but in denunciation of what he termed an alliance for the protection of Japan in her conquests upon Korea, and "huge slices" of China, Manchuria and Mongolia. Among other things the Georgian said:

"If this treaty is ratified, we are, in my judgment, committed to something which will logically and inevitably lead us into war, and that war may carry us into the Pacific, and another expeditionary force, which will go much farther than 3,000 miles from home and American boys will again shed their blood on foreign fields."

"In my judgment, and with the utmost respect for those who differ from me, we have no constitutional authority to consent in express terms to Japan's spoliation and by implication, at least, those of Great Britain. 'No one can say with any reasonableness that after having expressly ratified the seizure which Japan made in the Pacific, we can hereafter be heard to say that Great Britain has no good title. We stopped ourselves by the 1911 treaty; that conclusion is perfectly clear in my mind, that we might just as well have put in the name of Great Britain as to put in that of Japan when we expressly said that we consent to the robberies she committed during the great war, the spoils of which she now holds."

Sees Greater Menace.

"What friends will we make among the nations if we ratify this treaty? If the Anglo-Japanese alliance was a menace to us it is a menace to other nations; and that menace is made twice as dangerous when it gains the accession of our government and of France; this four-power treaty will arouse the suspicions and the animosities of all the other nations—nations which now perhaps have only friendly feelings for us. As to the other three parties, they make no new enemies. We are the losers, they are the gainers."

Speaking specifically of Japan, he said:

"Does Japan make any new enemies by this compact? She makes none. Germany hates her because she takes what Germany had previously taken and she is holding that of which Germany was despoiled. Russia has good reason to hate Japan and it is only a question of time when the legions of Trotsky will be marching towards Siberia and the frontier where they will meet the troops of Japan."

Charges Alliance.

"So it is, Mr. President, with all these nations; they make no new enemies, but they kindly give them to us. Is this an alliance? Why, it most assuredly is. Who will believe or one minute that all of those rejoicings in Japan over the British would have taken place if it had not been believed in London and in Tokio that they had something better and stronger than they already had in the Anglo-Japanese alliance? Nobody believes it. The idea of those astute diplomats of Japan and Great Britain spending month after month here incubating behind closed doors and bringing forth nothing except a mouse. Those mountains do not labor to bring forth mice."

"We have been warned by one who claims to know, that the military power of Japan never sleeps. We know that the military power of Great Britain never sleeps and we ought to know that the military power of this country never sleeps. We are in as much danger from militarism as any other country in the world and we are even now showing that we feel the necessity of curbing it."

"As the senator from Arizona, with his timely and welcome interruption reminds me, Japan not only pledged herself to Korea, but she has pledged herself to Russia and Great Britain on the same line and then broke those treaties shamelessly. Any nation which would commit a violation of solemn treaties as Japan has done and trampled the life out of the country to whom her faith was pledged is an utterly faithless country, and we would be fools if we put any confidence in her."

ULSTER PARLIAMENT CONVENES TUESDAY

Belfast, March 14.—(By the Associated Press.)—The Ulster parliament reconvened today. The king's speech opening the session stated that the legal process of transferring the various services in northern Ireland from British control to that of the Ulster government was now complete, but regretted that the transfer of the staff and the allocation of property and records to the government departments had not proceeded as expeditiously. The speech continued:

"I congratulate you on the manner in which, in spite of these obstacles the departments of government have been brought so rapidly in smooth working order. The spirit of conciliation shown in northern Ireland in the settlement of industrial disputes is tending toward a more satisfactory state of affairs."

The king expressed hope that means soon would be devised enabling the government departments to cope with the difficulty of the administrative problems and stated that projected legislation included conferring of powers necessary to prevent crime, secure peace and maintain order.

MANY CASUALTIES IN RECENT WEEKS

Belfast, March 14.—(By the Associated Press.)—Belfast's casualty list from the activities of gunmen and bomb throwers in the last ten weeks totals 83 dead and 157 seriously wounded, according to The Northern Whig, which declares this is "relatively more terrible than for the whole year 1921."

The list would have been greatly swollen, the newspaper adds, if all those who recently suffered bullet wounds were included. It points out as the worst feature of the recent outbreak the number of women and children, including babies who were struck by chance bullets or bomb splinters.

ALBERT P. TERHUNE VISITING SAVANNAH

Savannah, Ga., March 14.—(Special.)—Albert P. Terhune, of New York, well-known American writer of dog stories, is in Savannah for a few days. He is accompanied by Mrs. Terhune.

HOUSER WILL RUN FOR BROWN'S JOB

Fort Valley, Ga., March 14.—(Special.)—O. M. Houser, former mayor of Fort Valley for many years and prominent in secret order societies of the state, will oppose J. J. Brown for commissioner of agriculture and will wage an active campaign for election, it was announced Tuesday night.

Mr. Houser stated that he would make his formal announcement within the next several days and that he would announce his platform at that time. While Mr. Houser was not the author of such a statement, it is generally believed his candidacy will receive the support of Senator Thomas E. Watson, whose magazine recently attacked Commissioner Brown in no uncertain terms.

Senator Watson was accompanied to Washington when he took his seat in the United States senate by Mr. Houser and Dr. George H. Slappey, one of the best known peach growers in the state. It is understood that both Dr. Slappey and Mr. Houser have been in communication with the sage of McDuffie and that his replies to their inquiries concerning the proposed candidacy of the former mayor and well known farmer have been favorable.

T. G. CULBRETH DIES SUDDENLY TUESDAY

Valdosta, Ga., March 14.—(Special.)—Thomas G. Culbreth, large turpentine operator of Turner, in Echols county, died of heart failure at his home tonight. His death came suddenly.

Mr. Culbreth was one of the most prominent men of Echols county, having served his district as senator for two terms and also one term as member of the house. He moved to Georgia from North Carolina thirty years ago. He is survived by his wife and several children.

MRS. JOHN T. ALLEN DIES IN MILLEDGEVILLE

Milledgeville, Ga., March 14.—(Special.)—Mrs. Hatlie Hendrickson Allen, wife of Judge John T. Allen, of this city, died at her home in this city early Monday morning, after a lingering illness of several months. She lived her entire life in this city and she was prominently connected.

Mrs. Allen is survived by four children, Miss Isabella Allen, Mrs. W. T. Garrard, Jr., of Milledgeville; Mrs. Loyd Brown, of Gainesville, and one son, Marion Allen, of Atlanta. The funeral services were held Tuesday.

COLONEL FLEMING ASSUMES COMMAND AT MCLELLAND

Anniston, Ala., March 14.—(Special.)—Colonel Robert J. Fleming, cavalry, has arrived at Camp McClelland to assume command of the garrison troops now stationed there permanently, arrival of the ranking officer being followed by the appointment of Major R. F. Gresham as executive officer and the establishment of new headquarters in the base hospital area.

Major Graham was the commanding officer at the camp here for a month, coming with the first troops to the reservation over a month ago. Other new officers at the camp this week are Captain Harry H. Baird, Captain Wade H. Johnson, Captain Solomon S. Clark, Captain Charles H. Dayhoff, Lieutenant Frank O. Jewey, John D. Reynolds, Hugh G. Elliott and John T. Murphy. Captain Dayhoff being the camp adjutant, in charge of the affairs of the permanent garrison.

MURRAY TO OPEN NEW YORK BRANCH DANCING SCHOOL

Arthur Murray left on Tuesday for New York, where he will open a branch school in dancing to give personal instruction in addition to his correspondence school. The New York branches will be in charge of assistants. Mr. Murray expects to return to Atlanta in two weeks and will make headquarters here.

Arthur Murray is well known as a writer of dance articles. Six years ago he came to Atlanta and wrote his first story for The Constitution.

Arthur Murray's articles are now syndicated through the Newspaper Feature service in more than a hundred leading newspapers. He is also on the staff of Physical Culture Magazine.

In addition to teaching the world's largest dancing class in Atlanta, Mr. Murray teaches dancing by correspondence through his New York school. By mail he has pupils in Alexandria, Egypt, Holland, China, Japan, South Africa, Alaska, Spain, London, Paris and Hawaii.

During Mr. Murray's absence, Miss Margaret Bryan will be in charge of the local school. Miss Bryan will be assisted by Louise Cone, Campbell Johnson, A. S. Weil, Jack Rabey and Frances Riddle.

SHORTAGE CHARGED AGAINST POSTMASTER

Savannah, Ga., March 14.—(Special.)—E. A. Johnson, postmaster at Hiltonia, Ga., is held here on charges of embezzlement. A series of thefts by means of non-return on C. O. D. parcels is charged against him. He waived preliminary hearing.

RAND REBELLION FOILED BY SMUTS

Johannesburg, March 14.—The South African mine rebellion is practically over. Except for one strong hold, where the mine workers are still heavily entrenched and offering stubborn but futile resistance, the government forces have shattered the grip of the workers on the big mining centers.

The encircling movement directed by General Smuts, which trapped the well-equipped but poorly organized masses of miners and Boers in a complete ring of machine guns backed by heavy artillery and reinforced by deadly airplane bombing, was completed Tuesday, and a drive to hurl the rebels out of Fordsburg, their last point of resistance, will begin at 11 o'clock Wednesday morning.

It is announced that four thousand prisoners have been taken by the government police and military in the Brakpan district. The number includes some hundreds who are not characterized as "rebels," but who were coerced through fear into joining the ranks of the strikers.

At Fordsburg the miners were given one last opportunity to surrender themselves and their weapons. An ultimatum was dispatched to the leaders of the movement warning them that continued resistance to the forces of law and order would mean an intensive attack.

Up to the present time no reply to this warning has been received at government headquarters. Instead the miners at Fordsburg are working feverishly to consolidate their defenses, digging a network of trenches around the town, and compelling citizens to assist them in the work.

Unless the Fordsburg miners decide to surrender, the attack will be carried out in full force, with every weapon at the command of the government. The drive will begin with an aerial and artillery bombardment of the town, succeeded by an infantry move against the "enemy" works.

COTTON SHIPPED FROM ATLANTA SENT TO BREMEN

Savannah, Ga., March 14.—(Special.)—The steamship Alfred Nobel sailed last night from Savannah for Bremen and Rotterdam with a cargo of cotton—in the lot forty cars of compressed cotton shipped by an Atlanta firm to this port in one solid train a few days ago.

It is stated that the freight on the cotton shipment by rail to Savannah was considerably greater than the ocean freight charge will be to the German ports.

OPTOMETRISTS ELECT NEW OFFICERS TODAY

Entering upon their seventeenth annual convention, members of the Georgia State Association of Optometrists, 50 strong, met Tuesday in the Piedmont hotel in a representative assemblage from all sections of the state, including distinguished visiting members of the profession from other states. The convention this year, leaders agreed, bids fair to be one of the most successful in the history of the organization.

Discussion of technical and scientific subjects occupied the entire first day's session. Talks were made by E. A. Forshey, Kansas City; M. B. Clason, Columbus, Ga.; Robert D. Pettit, Chicago; J. H. Sprattling, Macon, and Fred E. Vaisiere, Rome. Mr. Vaisiere is president of the association.

The only social event of the convention was an informal dinner in the dining-room of the Piedmont Tuesday night. Midway of this affair the event was adjourned because of the untimely death of Dr. P. F. McKrown, of Copperhill, Tenn., who suffered a heart attack at the table from which he failed to recover. Dr. George B. Wood, of Rome, acted as toastmaster at the dinner.

Attending the convention, which will conclude Wednesday afternoon with a business session and election of officers for the ensuing year, are: Drs. Fred E. Vaisiere, Rome; W. W. Smith, Dublin, E. E.; Robert D. Pettit, Chicago; E. A. Forshey, Kansas City; O. J. Bagdasaryan, Atlanta; H. B. Nicholson, Atlanta; Mrs. R. B. Boswick, Savannah; Mrs. M. C. Minor, Gainesville; W. R. Wilfer, Douglas; W. C. Roberts, Millen; J. S. Millam, Nashville; F. H. Weller, New Orleans; P. H. Craig, New Jersey; W. E. Walker, Jr., Vidalia; J. H. Waters, Sylva; A. L. Blawie, Atlanta; H. O. Bolles, Atlanta; T. H. Wynne, Griffin; W. L. Crislie, Demorest; D. J. Boag, Atlanta; J. C. Dugan, Atlanta; F. E. McNabb, Atlanta; J. L. Pender, Athens; J. P. Parks, Quitman; J. W. Hale, Ashburn; George B. Wood, Rome; W. L. Bowen, Macon; S. M. Dekir, Condit; J. H. Sprattling, Macon; M. F. Fickett, Athens; J. W. Burman, Macon, and others.

THIRD DISTRICT EDITORS TO MEET

Americus, Ga., March 14.—(Special.)—Miss Emily Woodward, of The Vienna News, president of the Third District Press association, has sent out a call for editors of the third district to meet at Americus, March 25. It is expected that about 20 editors will attend.

President W. G. Sullivan, of the Georgia Press association, will take a prominent part in the discussions.

Armstrong's Linoleum

for Every Floor in the House

This floor doesn't mind being stepped on

THE Chicago office of the Quaker Oats Company is a busy place, and the floor in that office gets a pretty severe test. But this floor, though several years old, looks fresh and new every morning. It is Armstrong's Linoleum.

It's a quiet floor, firm, but elastic to the tread. The cleaners have a pretty easy time with it. It wipes up so readily.

The cost of maintaining a floor of Armstrong's Linoleum is about the lowest upkeep a building floor can have. Expensive refinishing is never necessary, and hard heels leave no mark upon its smooth, restful surface.

A quiet floor goes a long way toward making a quiet office. If you want such a floor for your office or building, consult your architect, contractor, or any good linoleum merchant. Ask about having the linoleum cemented down over a layer of builders' deadening felt. This is really the best way to lay a permanent linoleum floor, as repeated tests both in actual service and in our research work have proved.

We will furnish any merchant or contractor with data and specifications for laying by this method.

Office floors of linoleum are not expensive. Armstrong's Linoleum is guaranteed to give satisfaction.

except that it certainly does not tend to soften the heart of the world toward us and our self-asserted position of "isolation!"

Having kicked the Versailles treaty into a cocked hat, so far as we are concerned, and having refused to participate even in an advisory capacity in European reconstruction, now the announcement is made that official Washington feels highly insulted because the European reparations commission has done something without consulting us!

But how could we expect Europe to treat us in any other way? We have told them that we are not interested in their affairs; that we want no hand in their reconstruction activities.

Despite the fact that their major burden is the money debt they owe us, we have coldly refused even to sit at a table and talk with, and counsel them as to ways and means whereby they may reconstruct their industries and put themselves in position to pay what they owe us!

In business life, if a firm falls even its most arrogant creditor would at least do it the courtesy, it invited, to send a representative to talk over its plight and the proper steps to take in working it out of its difficulties; and the business creditor who is blessed with a tender heart and human conscience, would do all within his power to ease the suffering and ameliorate the distress of an unfortunate debtor.

Failure to do that would be violative of a fundamental of business ethics, and it would bring down upon the head of an offender the contempt of the business world.

Yet, as a nation, in our attitude toward Europe we are in exactly the position of an inconsiderate and inhuman creditor who puts the screws down upon the unfortunate debtor, going even so far as to reject an invitation to confer with our distressed creditors about their predicament!

And if in the full light of events it develops that we have not been treated with the highest measure of deference and respect by the nations of Europe we shall have nobody to blame for it but ourselves.

For many years Mr. Turman has been a leading factor in the real estate activities of Atlanta, and he has long been prominently identified with all phases of civic development.

He rendered splendid service as a member of the board of county commissioners of Fulton county, and the magnificent Fulton county courthouse, planned and built during his tenure as a commissioner, stands as a splendid monument to his vision, business ability, enterprise and constructive public spirit.

Mr. Turman was prominent in the civic, religious and philanthropic as well as the business life of the community, and was always to be depended upon for assistance in any worthy enterprise. He was held in highest esteem for his many virtues.

Though dying while still in the prime of life and at the height of his usefulness as a citizen, he leaves a record of good deeds and worthy achievements that will long perpetuate his memory.

CHAUFFEUR HUSBAND LEAVES MATZENAUER

San Francisco, March 14.—Margaret Matzenauer, famous diva, apparently has lost her chauffeur husband whom she termed "100 per cent man."

If you are thin and emaciated and wish something to help you put on flesh and increase your weight

Yeast Vitamins Tablets should be used in connection with organic Nuxated Iron. Without organic iron, both food and vitamins are absolutely useless, as your body cannot change inert, useless food into living cells and tissue unless you have plenty of organic iron in your blood. Organic iron takes up oxygen from your lungs. This oxygenated organic iron enters with your digested food as it is absorbed into your blood just as fine particles with coal or wood, and by so doing it creates tremendous power and energy. Without organic iron in your blood your food merely passes thru your body without doing you any good.

Arrangements have been made with the druggists of this city to give every reader of this paper a large $1.00 package of Gonorrhea Yeast Vitamins Tablets absolutely free with every purchase of a bottle of Nuxated Iron.

to enjoy the scenery. Later came the engagement and marriage and Giotzbach set the driving wheel.

The San Francisco Examiner today gives Giotzbach's reasons for leaving his bride to New York:

"I'd rather be a chauffeur in California than to dwell forever in the paces of Babylon," he said.

It would seem Giotzbach was forced to let another man drive his wife's automobile.

"It would drive any man crazy to sit back among the cushions and squirm every time he felt the back lash of the transmission, when all it needed was a real mechanic," the reporter quotes.

Neither did Giotzbach enjoy breakfast in bed. Nor did sitting up night after night through the moon scene of Lucia appeal to an ear attuned to the hum of a smooth-running motor.

The reporter says Giotzbach told him there had been no friction; that the chauffeur just "escaped" when his bride was not looking; that he will not go back.

Meanwhile, Matzenauer, it is said, wants her husband back. There is talk of compromises from New York, but unlistened to, says Giotzbach.

After this marriage, Mrs. Matzenauer said her first marriage, to Ferrar Fontana, failed because of artists' temperaments. She wanted a "man," she said. The anti-theater of her temperament theory is limited as responsible for the wreck of the new romance.

Giotzbach, a 6-foot westerner, commented: "Orchids will thrive in hot houses, but wild mustard needs the California sun."

Liquor Smuggling Case Is Ordered Against Britisher

Washington, March 14.—Attorney General Daugherty's instructions that proceedings be instituted against the British vessel Grace and Ruby held at Boston as a liquor smuggler, was today established by the right of this government to seize foreign vessels for violation of the prohibition laws even though they are beyond the 3-mile limit, it was indicated today at the justice department.

The test to be applied at Boston, it was explained, was whether the Grace and Ruby, which was operating 4 miles at sea, would be held to have been constructively within the 3-mile limit because liquor was brought ashore in the ship's own small boats.

Authority for such a construction of a government jurisdiction was said to be found in what is known as the Russian case. In this case, it was recalled, the British Columbian steamer Arana was seized by Russia in 1888 for taking seals in the Bering sea, when it was about 6 miles from the nearest land. It appeared in that case that the crew of the steamer were carrying on their operations about a half mile from the shore.

Lord Salisbury, of the British government, in his opinion on the case, held that "even if the Arana at the time of the seizure was herself outside the 3-mile territorial limit, the fact that she was by means of her boats, carrying on fishing within Russian waters without the prescribed license warranted her seizure and confiscation according to the provisions of the municipal law regulating the use of these waters."

The courtiers, wearing garments similar to those worn at royal celebrations in Europe, followed the ladies in waiting. The courtiers were Lawrence Houston, James L. Graham, Oliver Snapp, Hugh Smisson, Hilldon L. M. Byrd, Edwin Murray and E. M. Wright. The heralds were Henry Matthews and Joseph Matthews.

While Louis Fagan played the part of the host, Misses Maria Grey, Coriander, Sara Martin, Ruth Howard McMillan and Gladys Solomon acted as flower girls, while Miss Etta Carriers was Goddess of the Orchard.

After the attendance had been around the king and queen the robes of royalty band, crowning them as their rulers, the Sun Goddess, a massing of old Jesters, was crowned the Sun Goddess. The latter spectacle was brilliant in every detail and Governor Hardwick, before departing for Florida congratulated the participants, telling them the festival was a credit not only to themselves, their town and their country, but stood out as an accomplishment for the state of Georgia.

The weather was ideal for the occasion, and the announcement of the weather bureau on Monday to the effect that it would rain failed to put a damper on the feelings of the many men and women who had labored so tirelessly for weeks in an effort to make the celebration a successful one.

And they succeeded.

Everything went off like clockwork. Mounted patrols composed of members of the Frederick Witholt post of the American Legion supervised the parking of cars. It is estimated there were in excess of 10,000 automobiles from surrounding counties and border states.

Early this morning the clouds looked threatening, as if the weather man's prediction was to be fulfilled, but shortly after 7 o'clock the sun in all its brilliant radiance shot from out the clouds and the Peach county citizens had no doubt about the success of the festival after that time.

People from San Francisco, San Diego, Los Angeles and other points in California; Peoria, Chicago, and from several other cities in Illinois; New York, Boston, Brooklyn, Washington, Baltimore, Richmond, Dayton and Cleveland, Ohio, Philadelphia and many other points in the east attended the festival and when they resumed their journey homeward expressed their pleasure at having come, and said the trip was worth it.

He said: "I have visited the beautiful mountains in Switzerland; I have been in Venice, and have visited practically all of the natural points of interest in the world, but I really don't truly believe that I saw the prettiest sight of my life when I looked on the peach orchards in full bloom just at sundown Tuesday afternoon."

Promptly at 10 o'clock, thousands of automobiles, led by members of the reception committee, toured the peach section of Houston county and saw more than 100,000 peach trees in full bloom.

While representatives from practically every city of any size in the state attended the festival, Macon led with nearly 1,000 men and women, most of whom came through the country. In addition to staff photographers of different daily papers, motion pictures of the peach blossom pageant were made and probably will be shown at Macon and Atlanta during the present week.

Peach Festival Draws Thousands to Fort Valley

Visitors From Many States See First King and Queen Crowned Amidst Celebration.

BY RODERICK HOUSER.

Constitution Staff Correspondent.

Fort Valley, Ga., March 14.—(Special.)—It was a sight for the gods to see.

Twelve thousand persons, which included representatives from every southern state and from as far east as New York and as far west as San Francisco, all wearing beautiful peach blossoms furnished by the reception committee, assembled in Fort Valley today to pay homage to the king and queen of the great peach blossom festival which was given for the first time in the history of the famous Georgia industry.

Governor Thomas W. Hardwick, principal speaker of the day, was introduced by Emmett Houser, local attorney and president member of the general assembly. Mr. Hardwick discussed the peach industry and what it has done for the state of Georgia and how it had aided in the diversification campaign waged for the past several years.

"The one crop idea," said Mr. Hardwick, "had to be removed from the minds of the farmers if they were to go forward instead of backward in their battle for prosperity and the broadening out of the great peach industry had done more in aiding crop diversification than any other one thing in the state."

Indebted to Houston.

The people of the state of Georgia are indebted to the Fort Valley people and the people residing within the great Georgia peach belt for the service they have rendered in this line as well for the brilliant entertainment they are today furnishing to the thousands of their friends from all parts of the country.

Mr. Hardwick concluded by paying a tribute to Georgia and denouncing those who had criticized the state as the result of the misconduct of a few of its people.

On an artificially decorated float drawn by four thoroughbred horses, rode Miss Thelma Wilson, beautiful Fort Valley girl, who had been elected queen of the festival, and Dr. A. J. Titus, king of the festival.

Miss Wilson was attired in a beautiful dress which was vividly appropriate to the occasion, corresponding with peach blossoms which could be seen in every direction from where the great spectacle was staged.

Dressed in beautiful robes, similar to that of the peach blossoms, were the ladies in waiting, Miss Helen Marshall, Miss Farnalee Cheves, Miss Fanny Shaw, Miss Joe D. Eubanks, Miss Wilma Orr, Miss Gladys Slapper, Mrs. M. D. Hale and Mrs. G. O. Wright.

Courtiers.

WHOLESALE PRICE OF SHOES IS CUT BY MANY MAKERS

Brooklyn, Mass., March 14.—A reduction in the price of shoes was announced today by manufacturers of this city and the Old Colony district generally, comprising two of the largest men's shoemaking centers in the country. Although authoritative announcement of the amount of the cut was lacking, it was understood to be between 25 and 50 cents a pair wholesale.

FIGHTING RESUMED BY ITALIAN FACTIONS

Rome, March 14.—(By the Associated Press.)—Sanguinary encounters between fascist and socialist have been resumed with all their former terror, according to advices received in Rome today from various parts of Italy. Five workmen were killed by bullets from fascist revolvers in villages surrounding Parma, following isolated encounters between gangs of the various factions. More than a dozen were injured, including two fascists.

RAISED FOR JEWS

Campaign leaders are not discouraged by the fact that Georgia and Atlanta will not finish their campaign at the same time as the other sections of the country. Atlanta's campaign because now that the rest of the country with the five-way campaign, and the whole Georgia campaign was delayed as long as possible in order that the Georgia campaign could be full of the improving economic conditions," declared Victor H. Kriegshuber, zone chairman for the south.

"It is therefore natural that this campaign should finish later than the rest. Georgia and Atlanta are going to do their part, the more certainly because now that the rest of the country has made such a wonderful showing, Georgia cannot afford to fall behind."

Receive Encouragement.

Telegrams of encouragement were received from national headquarters of the campaign Tuesday by Armand M. state chairman.

"We are in Europe are so great that if we had fifty million dollars we could only scratch the surface. The people of Georgia I feel sure will want to give the more now that they know how the balance of the country has responded to this great cause. Keep up your good work and continue through until you have raised an amount that will measure up to the balance of the south," wired David A. Brown, national chairman of the campaign.

Arthur Harris, Atlanta chairman for the campaign, expressed the gratification of the committee upon the fact that many other sections have oversubscribed their quota means anything else but that Atlanta and Georgia must do the same thing.

Need Imperative.

"The need is so imperative, and any amount of money even within the possibility of raising is so inadequate to relieve completely the suffering which exists that we must do our share. To fail to do so would be the deficit caused under the work of other communities which have in good faith given more freely than they were asked. In order that more than the absolute minimum which it was expected to be possible to raise might be available for the relief work. Our committees have not the slightest idea of hiding behind the accomplishments of other sections to save ourselves of our definite responsibilities."

FAILURE TO RATIFY TREATY IS COSTLY

It took part in the occupation. It established there a calm in common with its partners, which in equity would seem to hold property over subsequent engagements. At that time the question of reparations was still in nebulous form. The only monetary liability definitely and conclusively admitted by Germany at the signing of the armistice was for the exact cost, whatever it might be, of the occupation.

Mistake Evident.

The issue seems to be as to whether this claim was recognized by the treaty of Versailles and, if not, whether Germany's reaffirmation of her liability, as indicated in the treaty of Berlin, was not bound by the treaty of Berlin.

Whatever the outcome the fact remains that every day brings new evidence of the serious international mistake this government made in not signing a treaty of peace.

Lake Charles, La., March 14.—Mistaking his wife, who was watching an electrical storm from the window, for a burglar, F. W. Weir last night fired two bullets into her body, seriously injuring her.

"Love of 3 Kings"

"The Love of Three Kings" one of the most difficult operas in the repertoire of the Metropolitan Grand Opera company, which is to be given in Atlanta during the coming season, was notably produced Tuesday night in Cable hall by artists of the Joseph Habersham chapter. Daughters of American Revolution.

Miss Nellie Nix Edwards, soprano, was at her best in the opera, her rich voice taking in the high notes with ease. R. E. Dale, tenor, captivated his audience with his voice, which showed that he was well fitted for the role he assumed.

Lawson Davis, tenor, sang several solos and appeared with Miss Edwards in duet numbers. Mrs. E. Garnett Boyd told the story of the opera in a pleasing way.

"Atlanta is to be congratulated on having such wonderful local talent," declared Mrs. William Lawson Peel, who was in the audience. "It was a pleasant surprise to hear this beautiful opera rendered by local artists in such a pleasing way."

Immediately following the opera, a chorus, made up of the choir of Trinity Methodist church, gave, off stage, a number of selections.

"Carmen" will be given by the same local artists in Cable hall at 8:30 o'clock Thursday evening, it was announced.

Cotton Exchange But Bucket Shop, Say Ex-Members

New York, March 14.—Charges that the American cotton exchange is a huge bucketshop, where actual trading is rare and where the southern speculator is at the mercy of the New York broker, were made today by former members of the exchange, at a "Join Doe" investigation conducted by the district attorney's office before Chief City Magistrate McAdoo.

Witnesses testified to numerous instances of "cross trading," fictitious orders, dummy accounts, "scalping," secret manipulation of unrecorded transactions, sensational advertising designed to woo the accounts of small speculators in the south and undisciplined bucketing of orders.

J. B. Watson, a member of the firm of Wilson & Co., which was expelled from the exchange last February 23, on charges that he had "bucketed" his clients against further dealings with the institution, were principal witnesses for the prosecution.

Brokers Took Chance.

"When there was cotton for sale in the ring, we made bona fide sales for our clients," Mr. Watson testified. "But the southerner, who is an optimist about the cotton market, almost invariably bought. As a result, there seldom was any cotton for sale, and brokers simply 'bucketed' the orders, taking a chance on covering themselves when cotton eventually was offered in the ring."

The witness declared that he withdrew from the exchange after repeated complaints to officials that it had become absolutely impossible to transact business without "bucketing." At the time of his resignation in February, he declared, conditions were such that little trading was done on the floor of the exchange, most of the orders from customers being bucketed outright.

Pamphlets Introduced.

Several gilt embossed pamphlets, distributed through the south by New York brokers, were introduced as evidence.

"These should be called to the attention of the postal authorities," Magistrate McAdoo told the prosecuting attorneys.

The pamphlets were entitled "southern cotton" and "cotton for the south" and contained a long and interesting story that every red-blooded southerner should know.

"How to trade in cotton, stocks and grain—by Randolph Rose," and "Methods of successful cotton trading."

Mr. Rose was cited by each of the witnesses today as a member of the biggest firm connected with the American cotton exchange, and leader in bucketshop methods.

Efforts of counsel for the American cotton exchange were balked in their attempts to cross-examine witnesses, by Magistrate McAdoo.

"I am personally a people's grand jury here," he said. "You shall not be permitted to ask any witnesses a question without the consent of the district attorney."

The investigation will be continued Thursday.

CAN'T READ PAPERS OR EAT PEANUTS IN THIS COURT

Savannah, Ga., March 14.—(Special.)—While Judge Peter W. Meldrim is taking a fortnight's rest, after several hard court terms, Judge E. T. Shurley, of Warrenton, Toombs circuit, is sitting in Chatham superior court this week and next week.

He created a stir when he forbade at the opening session the eating of peanuts and the reading of newspapers in the courtroom while court is in session.

SHERIFF IS KILLED BY MOONSHINERS

Chattanooga, Tenn., March 14.—Sheriff I. L. Smith, of Bradley county, was shot and killed at 10 o'clock this morning by moonshiners while making a raid on a still near Lauderback Springs, at the foot of White Oak mountain.

The killing of Sheriff I. L. Smith, of Bradley county, near Lauderback Springs this morning, created wide excitement in that county. Sheriff Bush, of Hamilton county, and a squad of prohibition enforcement officers from Chattanooga, have gone to the scene of the killing. Bloodhounds were on the trail of the murderers at noon.

Virginia Carvel Service in Sterling Silver

This wonderful solid silver pattern is named for Winston Churchill's well-loved heroine of "The Crisis."

It is a design of simple and classic lines to which a distinct Colonial feeling is imparted by the dainty flower sprays that fall so naturally around the mirror-like surface.

While delightfully reminiscent of our country's early romantic years, it is in entire harmony with the most modern expression of the finest period dining-room furniture of today.

This patented pattern is unusually heavy, and is made in flatware as well as in complete table service, so additional pieces to match may be secured at any time.

WORK TO UNCOVER NEW BOMB PLOT

New York, March 14.—Taking the death of Peter Picura by a bomb of his own making as their cue, detectives of the police bomb squad worked today to uncover a possible May day bomb plot.

Picura, man of mystery, always well supplied with funds, yet never known to work, was described by the police today as a "direct action" anarchist. The bomb he was assembling in his kitchen last night, while his wife was preparing supper and his baby daughter was playing a few feet away, was said to be almost an exact duplicate of those used by terrorists in the past.

Picura was a plumber by trade and is described by the police as a type fitting in well with the program of "intellectual" radicals, who direct the deeds of violence that men of lesser intellect carry through.

The "intellectual" detectives of the bomb squad said, carry on their organization work chiefly among skilled mechanics, usually Russians or Poles, in stilling hatred of the well-to-do in the heart of a recruit is an easy matter.

THE boll weevil homeless is harmless; and he stays homeless till he finds a cotton square tender enough for him to eat into.

When it's a tough square he stays out.

Use Nitrate of Soda when you plant and all your squares will be tough squares when the boll weevil arrives, because the nitrogen that is in the Chilean Nitrate of Soda gets into the soil quickly and feeds the young plants. They grow quickly and strongly—too strongly for the boll weevil.

When your brand of fertilizer does not carry more than 2 or 3 per cent of nitrogen, use in addition 200 lbs. of Nitrate of Soda per acre.

Court Officials and Lawyers in Court Murder Trial

Above are officials of the superior court of Talbot county and the brilliant array of counsel in the trial of Major Lee Court, at Talbotton, who is charged with the murder of Court Superintendent of Schools A. B. McNiece. Right: Robert C. Palmer, of Columbus, former solicitor-general of the Chattahoochee circuit, leading counsel for the defense, and Judge George P. Munro, presiding jurist. The inset shows Solicitor General C. Frank McLaughlin, who is handling the prosecution. The group to the left is composed of left to right, A. J. Perryman, of Talbotton, for the defense; Hewlett Hall, former attorney-general, of Newnan, appearing for the state; Judge Frank Foley, of Columbus, for the defense; John A. Smith, of Talbotton, for the defense; J. R. Terrell, of Columbus, former solicitor-general and judge of the Coweta circuit and brother of the late United States Senator Joe Terrell, and Attorney Palmer.

ing when Solicitor-General McLaughlin announced at the convening of court that the state would rest its case. It was expected by spectators that the state had more than a dozen witnesses to place on the stand.

After a short consultation, the defense caused another surprise when it placed Court on the stand. Court arose from his chair, where he was seated among his relatives, with a smile on his face. He was dressed in a brown serge suit and wore a small bunch of violets in the lapel of his coat. He was instructed by Judge P. Munro as to how to present his statement. At the conclusion of the court's instructions Court pulled from his pocket several sheets of paper, looked at the first sheet and then addressed the jury.

"I have lain in that jail there for one hundred and thirty-eight days waiting for a chance to tell my story," he said. "I wish to say that none of the stories that have appeared in the newspapers, or any of the propaganda that has been going the rounds, has emanated from me, or my attorney, Mrs. A. B. McNiece. I am no longer about to speak. She spoke here yesterday and I welcome the chance to reply."

"So in the latter part of May I went to McNiece's office. I had a very frank and candid talk with him. I told McNiece that his visits to my home were too frequent, and his attentions to me entirely unwelcome. I told McNiece that I was beginning to worry a little bit, but I hoped that matters would adjust themselves and things would blow over so that it would cause no scandal and disgrace, or anything that would bring sorrow to all of us, but when I would go and return would find that things had been keeping up just the same.

I told McNiece that his visits to my home were too frequent, and his attentions to me entirely unwelcome. "Under these circumstances, I considered a long time whether I would continue this farm bureau work and leave my home so much. At that time I was beginning to worry a little bit, but I hoped that matters would adjust themselves and things would blow over so that it would cause no scandal and disgrace, or anything that would bring sorrow to all of us, but when I would go and return would find that things had been keeping up just the same.

"McNiece admitted his admiration for my wife. He said he considered her the most wonderful woman that he had ever met. I told him that no matter what his regard was for another man's wife, that it was wrong and irregular and he should stop it, that it was bound to cause criticism and talk and would bring disgrace on us all if it got out and got to be the matter of public talk. He promised to be more circumspect and careful in his attention to my wife after that."

"I went home and warned my wife about the effects it would have, not only on her, but on her son; that it would absolutely ruin them both, but my talks accomplished nothing. When I would come back I would find out the visits had been keeping up just the same."

"Tears stood in his eyes, when he told of the shooting of McNiece. He said that he went to the office to give McNiece a final warning to keep away from his wife and that McNiece in strong words stated that his accusations were false and "white with anger, he sprang from his desk. I shot him."

Court at the conclusion of his statement briefly referred to the charges made by Mrs. McNiece on the stand yesterday, which he charged that her statement had been prepared by attorneys for the state and that it was "a lie."

"I hardly think it is necessary for me to offer an explanation of the remarkable story that Mrs. McNiece told here on this stand yesterday," he said. "The only explanation I have to make is that somebody must have put her up to tell it. It is not a habit of mine of disputing a lady's word, but what Mrs. McNiece swore here on the stand yesterday is absolutely untrue. I never said or did an improper thing to Mrs. McNiece in my life. I sympathized with her, and we discussed the relations between my wife and McNiece, and I asked her assistance in bringing it to an end. Mrs. McNiece did tell me that the situation bore on her heart and mind just as much as it did on mine."

"Mrs. McNiece was called to the stand during the early afternoon in rebuttal. She told of several occasions after Court this morning alleged that he told McNiece to stay away from his home, that she and her husband, upon invitation from the Courts, had visited the latter's home and that on one or more occasions, Court had insisted on McNiece riding in his automobile with him. Court had taken supper with them when Mrs. Court was attending the Court wedding in Columbus, she said, the date of which was only a short time prior to the shooting."

Denies Charge.

Mrs. McNiece was asked by Attorney McLaughlin had anybody told her to testify to the facts that she did on the stand yesterday afternoon. Mrs. McNiece said that nobody under the sun had suggested it. "Neither would I purport myself, nor embarrassed myself by relating before this court those humiliating circumstances, had it not been the truth."

Prior to this question Mrs. McNiece explained the absence of Miss Estelle McNiece, sister of McNiece, and Miss Dunbar, her sister, two Atlanta trained nurses who attended her husband while he battled with death at the Piedmont sanitarium in Atlanta, who were to come here to testify as to the dying statement made by McNiece. She stated that both witnesses had been injured in the A. B. & A. railroad wreck outside of Atlanta and were now in a hospital.

Tells of Condition.

The defense fought for more than two hours to keep McNiece's dying statement from being introduced. With the jury ordered retired, Miss Lottie Corker, of Atlanta, a trained nurse who also attended McNiece in Atlanta, was called to the stand to testify as to the dying statement made by McNiece. She said she regarded him as being rational in mind, but that he was in a serious condition. Dr. McRae was present when the statement was signed.

It was brought into the sick room by Dr. Henry McGehee, of Atlanta, a friend of McNiece, he said. McNiece was rational at the time he signed the statement, he continued.

The defense continued to fight against the introduction of the statement, stating that the state had not proved that in law the statement was a prima facie dying declaration. The court overruled the objection and at the beginning of the afternoon session ordered the jury into the box and the statement was read:

The statement follows in full:

"On the morning that Major Court shot me, I went into Mr. Pinkston's office to see him, and Major Court was sitting in there. I did not know that Court was in the office. When I entered, Major Court spoke and said he would like to talk to me. I told him all right, to come into my office. We walked into my office and Major Court closed the door as we entered. I sat down at my desk and Major Court continued to stand up, and he never did sit down."

"The first thing he said was that he understood that I was criticizing him for walking home with Celeste, my wife, after dark. I told him I had not criticized him because I felt that her character was such that she could be trusted alone with anybody. He then accused me of inviting Mrs. Court to go to Collinsworth church to quarterly meeting. I told him that I did not invite her; that my wife invited her. He then said, 'There is a lie out, my wife said that you invited her.' I replied that was all right; I was responsible for my wife and myself both. He then began to enumerate insinuations against Mrs. Court, stating that she was a liar and that she had been with him on the night of the shooting."

Ja O. Pinkston, a constable demonstration agent, was also placed on the stand in rebuttal and testified as to Court visiting McNieces with him and taking supper with them a short time before the shooting. Mr. Pinkston was used to attempt to break down Court's statement to the effect that he warned McNiece to remain away from his home and also to corroborate Mrs. McNiece's testimony that Court had been attentive to her until the time of the shooting."

T. H. Bryant, a local hardware man, stated that he was expert in firearms and told of being called by Sheriff Watkins a few days after the shooting to unbreach the pistol used by Court in shooting McNiece. Mr. Bryant testified that he found that one cartridge had been snapped and that one between the one which was discharged was empty. He stated that Court's statement must have been made by McNiece on his deathbed."

Judge J. R. Terrell, for the defense; Solicitor-General McLaughlin, for the state; Hewlett Hall, for the state, and Judge George C. P. for the defense, will speak Wednesday.

"This is all that occurred in my office and all that was said at the time of the shooting. On the morning that Major Court shot me in my office, he didn't even refer to, intimate or suggest any improper or indiscreet conduct on my part, in fact, he made no reference whatever to me or to Mrs. Court that would indicate that he had any complaint or grievance against me relative to my conduct toward Mrs. Court, or her conduct toward me. The relations between myself and Mrs. Court have always and only been that of a perfect gentleman and lady."

"His mark" is witnessed by Dr. Floyd W. McRae, Jr., and the statement attested to by Dr. Floyd McRae and Miss Estelle McNiece.

The state in rebuttal also introduced Wilmer Scarborough, of Columbus, who testified that he saw Court when he was out on bail prior to McNiece's death in Columbus attending the fair. On this occasion Court he said, and when he spoke of the tragedy, Court made the statement that he did not know why he shot McNiece.

He then pulled his concealed pistol from his right hip pocket. He snapped it at me twice, and then shot me. I was sitting down by my chair at my desk when he shot me; I had no weapon, not even a knife, and was given absolutely no chance to defend myself. Major Court shot me without cause or provocation."

Miss Evelyn Stephens Weds F. Wray Aldenderfer Tuesday

A beautiful home wedding marked by unusual elegance and simplicity was that of Miss Evelyn Stephens and Franklin Wray Aldenderfer, of Chicago, which was solemnized Tuesday evening at 6 o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Dr. and Mrs. Luther P. Stephens, on Peachtree street. Rev. C. J. Harrell, pastor of the First Methodist church, performed the ceremony.

First to enter were Misses Frances Powell and Lucy Davis, as bridesmaids.

Miss Powell was lovely in a costume of hyacinth blue chiffon, made over silver cloth. The long-waisted bodice was edged with dainty flowers that hung gracefully over the silver girdle.

Miss Davis wore a gown of pink tulle, the tight bodice being fashioned with a round neck. Rows of tulle petals formed the skirt, and forming the girdle was a sash of pink tulle which fell to the floor. Silver wreaths were worn by the bridesmaids, and the flowers were sweet peas in the pastel shades, showered with swansons.

Miss Louise Campbell entered alone, wearing a beautiful frock of pink chiffon over satin, the girdle formed of pink rosebuds, and a silver wreath worn in her hair. She carried an arm bouquet of sweet peas in the pastel shades.

James Madden Hatcher, of Columbus, acted as best man, and the groomsmen were Edwin Davis and Luther Stephens.

The bride entered with her father, who gave her in marriage. She was lovely in her wedding gown of ivory white satin, fashioned very simply, the round neck was outlined with seed pearls, and at intervals on the skirt were sprays of orange blossoms. The tulle veil was caught to her hair by a coronet of orange blossoms and fell to the end of her long court train, which hung from the shoulders. She carried a bouquet of orchids showing with valley lilies.

The ceremony was followed by a reception, assembling relatives of the bride and groom, and a few close friends.

Wedding Trip.
During the evening Mr. Aldenderfer and his bride left for an extended wedding trip, after which they will be at home in Rogers Park, Chicago, Ill. The bride is a graduate of Washington seminary, later going to Emerson College of Oratory, in Boston, where she spent three years. Although she has never made a formal debut since returning from school, she has been very popular socially, and is noted for her charm and intellectual attainments.

During the war Mrs. Aldenderfer was very active and an earnest leader in Red Cross work. She is a representative of distinguished families in the state, her grandparents, the late Major Madison Bell and Mrs. Bell, and the late Major and Mrs. Harwell Stephens, all being prominently identified with social and political life of pioneer Atlanta.

Mr. Aldenderfer, the son of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Aldenderfer, of Chicago, attended college at the University of Minnesota, and is a member of the Kappa Sigma fraternity. He was one of the noted athletes of the university, being a popular member of the football team. During his senior year America entered the world war, and he volunteered, being sent at once to France, where he served eight months. Upon his return to America, Mr. Aldenderfer entered Harvard Law school, and since his graduation has been prominently identified with a distinguished law firm in Chicago. He comes of a family of prominence and holds an important place in the business and social world.

Informal Parties Arranged to Honor Mrs. Burney Dobbs

Birthday Dinner For Mr. Sievers.

A surprise dinner was given in honor of F. A. Sievers, Sunday, in celebration of his seventy-fifth birthday.

The guests were entertained at the country home of Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Sievers, Jr. The home was artistically decorated throughout with ferns and cut flowers. A delicious dinner was served from a prettily appointed table, in the center of which was placed a large birthday cake, bearing 75 pink wax candles.

Among the invited children and grandchildren were Mr. and Mrs. G. E. Sievers, of Ben Hill; Mr. and Mrs. L. F. Sievers, of College Park; Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Doyal, Mr. and Mrs. P. J. McGuire, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Sievers, Jr., Miss Lena Sievers, Miss Stella Sievers, Miss Elsie Doyal, Miss Margaret McGuire, Miss Eleanor McGuire, Miss Betty McGuire, Masters Herman Doyal, Ivan Doyal, G. E. Sievers, Jr., James F. Sievers and Edwin A. McGuire. Another son, F. William Sievers, the sculptor, of Richmond, Va., and his family were unable to be present.

Miss Cobb to Present Pupils.

Miss Carolyn Cobb will present her pupils, Miss Kathryn Behner and Walter Bedard, in the first year recital this afternoon at Eggleston hall. They will give a one-act miracle play, "The Traveling Man," by Lady Gregory. Miss Behner will play the part of the woman, and Mr. Bedard that of the traveling man. They will be assisted by little Miss Virginia Turner, the daughter and pupil of Mrs. C. Gainer Turner, who will play the part of the child. The costumes have been designed by the pupils themselves.

The program will be opened by Miss Lillian LeCont, who will play "The Harp That Once Through Tara's Halls," on a little Clark Irish harp. Miss LeCont is a pupil of the Griffith School of Music.

Matters discussed included proposed erection of a monument over the grave of Miss Camille O'Brien, a Red Cross nurse who died overseas, and who was a close friend of one of the chapter members, Mrs. L. L. Oslin; the placing of markers on the graves of three revolutionary soldiers in this vicinity, and the marking of an Indian trail on Stone mountain.

The chapter also endorsed the candidacy of Mrs. Charles Akerman for state regent.

At the close of the business meeting.

YOU'LL GET RID OF BLACKHEADS SURE

There is one simple, safe and sure way that never fails to get rid of blackheads and that is to dissolve them.

To do this get two ounces of calomel powder from any drug store—sprinkle a little on a hot, wet sponge—rub over the blackheads briskly—wash the parts and you will be surprised how the blackheads have disappeared. Big blackheads, little blackheads, no matter where they are, simply dissolve and disappear, leaving the parts without any mark whatever. Blackheads are simply a mixture of dust and dirt and secretions from the body that form in the pores of the skin. Pinching and squeezing only cause irritation, make large pores and do not get the blackheads out, they only become hard. The calomel powder and the water simply dissolve the blackheads so they wash right out, leaving the pores free and clean and in their natural condition. Anyone troubled with these unsightly blemishes should certainly try this simple method.—(adv.)

ing, Mrs. Moore served delicious refreshments. The next meeting of the chapter will be with Mrs. E. A. Warwick in Clarkston.

Chippendale Dining Suite*Chippendale

Dating from about 1760, the style of Chippendale is one of the most interesting in the study of period furniture.

Rated one of the greatest, this master of design did not originate so much as he borrowed and combined with marvelous skill the best of the motives of other periods and designs.

The keen observer will find distinct traces of the Gothic, Queen Anne, the rococo of the French, and a great deal of the Chinese.

With consummate skill, he borrowed and blended into an exquisitely harmonious whole, producing designs at once distinctive and beautiful, which have remained for all time as aristocrats of the furniture world.

A Wife on Leave*Who's Who and What's Happened.

Richard Brabant, a successful young lawyer, has given a year's leave of absence to his wife, Sally, hoping that she will learn something of life during that time. She begins by meeting Keith Gilbert, always labeled "Dangerous," and through him associating with New York's gayest crowd of celebrities of the article world, among them Leo Craig, a gritty artist; Guy Seiden, a playwright; and Graham Brown, a character. Gilbert makes no secret of his love for her, and does Patricia Loring, a modern dancer, make any secret of her fondness for him. Sally goes to a dance club with Barbara Lane, who is an old-fashioned wife, and her husband and their guest, Neal Calhoun, who sees Gilbert with Patricia. Calhoun intimates that Gilbert is not a man whom Sally should know. Sally learns that her husband, who has gone west, has taken his pretty secretary with him, and is so played at the knowledge that she accepts Gilbert's invitation to a homestead on the river and sees signals from the house. A strange man appears to arrest Gilbert for kidnapping, but he escapes to a launch on the river, taking Sally with him. Barbara and Andy quarrel about Sally. Andy

Makes good TEA a certainty*CHAPTER XXVII.*A Lovely Fugitive.

Sally had not counted on the glimpse of Keith Gilbert's disposition that her defiance brought forth; indeed, she had never known that his face could turn dark with surly anger, or that his hand could narrow so forbiddingly. She had seen a man torn on a disobedient dog in just that way once, long ago, and had screamed with fright. Now Keith turned to her in just that way.

She did not flinch, but faced him bravely. Her hands pressed flat against the wall behind her, head up, eyes steady. He could kill her if he wanted to, but he could not drag her off to any tropical paradise to await Dick's divorcing her.

"I've had about all of this nonsense that I care for," he told her, grimly. "You've stood me off just as long as you're going to. Why have you payed around with me if you didn't want to encourage me? Do you think that you can let a man make love to you, even by intimidation as I've done, and then drop him?"

"You wanted to see life—well, you're going to see it now, my dear! This little vacation of yours, this year of absence, is going to turn out differently than either you or your husband planned! He came a step nearer. What would he do if he took her in his arms she did not know. It would be useless to fight against his caresses—he was so much stronger than she. And now that he was aroused, why, there was nothing that she could do to make him relent and be kind to her.

Yet she fought down the fear that seemed to rise into her throat and try to strangle her. There would be some way out—something would happen. The situation still seemed preposterous to her. It was incredible that she, Sally Brabant, should be involved in such melodrama as this. A fugitive from justice—kidnapped by a man who swore that he would never let her go back to her husband—if Keith Gilbert had not been facing her, she would have laughed at the mere thought of such a thing. "It will look well in the papers," he was taunting her now. "Sally Brabant, beautiful young woman, elopes with Keith Gilbert, who flees with her from charges of smuggling liquor! And they'll interview the crowd that was at the Byrrie—Leo and Pats and Brown—and he'll tell of how he saw the lights on the river; you saw them too, didn't you? Well, they were on this boat; the men on it were signalling to me that they'd be at the landing if I wanted them—as I did, you see. And it was my light you saw from the road."

"Giddy, I think you're mad," she told him, quietly; her anger had died down now, and left her cool, determined that somehow she would get out of this impossible situation. "You can't do this, you know—you can't run away with me. It wouldn't do any good if you did—I don't love you, and never can. Even if you came between Dick and me, I wouldn't ever marry you. Why, you're just as stubborn and foolish as you were when we were children—so matter how silly a thing was you'd go through with it because you had said you would. Now you're behaving in that same childish way. Come, Giddy—remember that we're grown up now, and that you can't play because any more."

For a moment she thought that her talking to him had had some effect; he turned half away from her, irresolute. But then he glanced back again, and her beauty struck him afresh. The desire for her was too much for him; he stepped forward, arms out, and with wild fright, she turned, reached out blindly and found that she had stumbled into a door leading to the deck.

Frantically she ran up the few steps; at least there would be other men there, who might help her. Indeed, one of them came forward just as she tripped on a coil of rope, and caught her when she would have fallen to the deck.

She looked up, clinging to him; she was trembling so that she would have fallen if he had not held her up. The man's sou'wester was drawn well down over his eyes, and his coat collar was turned up, so that she could not see his face. Yet she knew that he was not a workman or a sailor, somehow.

"Want a breath of air?" he asked, and his voice came back for her memory that would identify it. "Here—let me put this coat around you—that's it. Now sit down here."

He did not ask her if she would sit down—he told her to—she wondered at that, yet there was relief in obeying him. She dropped down on the box that he placed for her, then turned to him again as Keith Gilbert appeared beside him.

"That'll do—," he said to the man, curtly. "Get back to your place!"

"Oh, no—no!" Sally clung to the stranger's arm; she could not bear the thought of being left alone with Gilbert.

"Go back to your place!" Keith spoke menacingly now, but the man remained where he was.

"If you don't ask her to get out of here I'll throw you overboard," Keith told him, and raised his arm to strike. But in the moment when he stepped forward and quicker than Sally's eyes could follow his movements, he had thrown Keith to the deck and was binding him with ropes of rope that he caught up as Keith fell.

He turned to her then, dragging off the sou'wester that had concealed his face effectively, and she found herself looking up into Neal Calhoun's eyes.

Adèle looked up in amazement, dropping her arms from around Jeanne's shoulder.

"Is that all you have to say? Aren't you ashamed?"

"Certainly not," replied Jeanne calmly. "He told me he was going to."

Adèle stared at her blankly. "And knowing that, you let him come up to see me?"

"My dear child, I'm not Henry's guardian. If he wants to propose to you it's his own affair."

"But Jeanne," protested Adèle, "he is so honest and straightforward, and you knew that I was up against it financially. I was sure. Why, I might have accepted him."

Jeanne raised her brow. "You mean to say, then, that you didn't?"

"Certainly not! I haven't become so unprincipled yet that I'll permit any man to marry me because I'm financially ruined."

Jeanne walked over to the drawing room mantel, and began to move a bit of bric-a-brac aimlessly.

"I had the most curious idea that maybe you called for him."

"Cared for him?" echoed Adèle. "I love him with all my heart."

Jeanne set down the ornament. "Then, why," she began incredulously.

"That's just it," explained Adèle. "If I didn't love him I'd take him in a minute. I know he hasn't much money, and I've always been used to luxuries. But those things don't seem to matter any more. I could be just as happy without expensive frocks and furs and jewels."

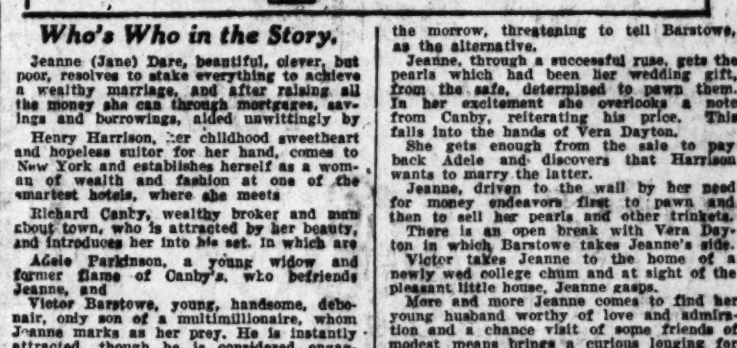

"It was somebody I really cared about. Women like you and me get to put a lot of false dependence on our surroundings. Since I've had to sell my furs and jewels and most of my clothes I've found that out. Except for the beastly loneliness of it all, and the worry about how I was going to pay my debts, I felt curiously relieved of a terrible burden. I didn't have to keep up appearances any more, I didn't have to keep step with the glittering procession. I didn't have to smile till my face ached."

Jeanne was looking at her curiously. It seemed to her that Adèle was voicing the very thoughts that she had been unable to put into words.

"If you don't marry Henry because of this silly, neuritic reason, you are a silly little fool. He adores you."

Adèle shook her head.

Another fine installment of this story tomorrow.

Who's Who in the Story.

Jeanne (Janel) Dore, beautiful, clever, but poor, resolves to make everything to achieve a wealthy marriage, and after raising all the money she can through mortgages, savings, and borrowings, elopes unwittingly with Henry Harrison, her childhood sweetheart and hopeless suitor for her hand, comes to New York and establishes herself as a woman of wealth and fashion at one of the smartest hotels, where she meets

Richard Canby, wealthy broker and man about town, who is attracted by her beauty, and introduces her into the set, in which are Adèle Parkinson, a young widow and former flame of Canby's, who befriends Jeanne, and Victor Barnstone, young, handsome, debauched, only son of a multimillionaire, whom Jeanne marks as her prey. He is instantly attracted, though he is considered engaged to Vera Dayton, a childhood acquaintance, whom his family favors.

The family object to Jeanne, because she is without credentials, but she, indulging in one mad extravagance after another, despite the fact that Harrison has given her his last cent in savings, and taken her worthless property in exchange, wins them over, and is married to Barnstone. After a honeymoon spent on the Barnstone yacht, she returns to face her numerous creditors, only to find that her husband is not the help to the Barnstone million. Meanwhile her creditors have become impatient, and her modest even goes so far as to send the bill for her marriage to young Barnstone, but Jeanne interprets the letter though not without the knowledge of her father-in-law's secretary. Adèle Parkinson loses all her money in a stock venture, and demands that Jeanne repay a loan she had made her before her marriage. Jeanne, desperate, appeals to Canby, but is refused by him unless she pays a hateful price. Quite unexpectedly one day she discovers in a secret compartment of the safe case, that Bonicetti, the violinist, had given her for a wedding present, a magnificent necklace of rubies. Her efforts to solve the mystery of their presence are foiled by Bonicetti's illness, and they succeed in arousing the suspicions of her mother-in-law and Vera Dayton, both of whom she sees her enemies.

Jeanne wears the necklace to her mother-in-law's dinner, and it is recognized by one of the guests, a well-known jewel collector, as a famous Italian necklace, with a gruesome history.

The story of its history as told by the jewel collector, Jarvis Bonicetti, and the inference to the other guests is that the necklace had given her the necklace.

Adèle that night demands her money on the morrow, threatening to tell Barnstone, as the alternative.

Jeanne, through a successful ruse, gets the pearls which had been her wedding gift, from the safe, determined to pawn them. In her confusion she confounds a letter from Canby, reiterating his price. This falls into the hands of Vera Dayton.

Jeanne, driven to the wall by her need for money, endeavors first to pawn and then to sell her pearls, and other trinkets. There is an open break with Vera Dayton, in which Barnstone takes Jeanne's side.

Victor takes Jeanne to the home of a newly wed college chum and at night of the pleasant little house, Jeanne escapes.

More and more Jeanne comes to find her young husband worthy of love and admiration, and a chance visit of some friends of modest means brings a curious longing for a simple home of her own and dissatisfaction with her present mode of living.

CHAP. LXXVII.

Another Who Is Weary.

Jeanne dined alone with her husband that evening. She had ordered dinner served in the breakfast room, preferring it to the impressive stateliness of the walnut-paneled dining room, where electric candles burned unwaveringly in conventional wall sockets, and the Butler stood rigidly at attention behind her high-carved chair.

The breakfast room was warm and fragrant with the scent of blooming plants. The table was laid cozily for two, and lighted by two golden candles in silver candlesticks. The servant came only in answer to Jeanne's ring to change the plates.

Barnstone had dressed for dinner, but Jeanne wore the simplest gown in her wardrobe. It was a girlish little affair of organdy with a quaint fichu bodice, and instead of jewels, she wore a simple band of black velvet around each wrist. She had sent her maid away, and had dressed her hair herself, brushing out the conventional Marcel and dressing it simply, with the merest suspicion of a wave. It curled in tiny tendrils about her ears and the low burnished mass of it rested with stewed prunes or peaches?

THERE isn't anything better for breakfast or lunch than a dish of Grape-Nuts, with cream or milk, and stewed prunes or peaches.

This delicious combination gives you the elements of a well-balanced food. For it contains not only the material needed to build tissue and furnish energy, but it also supplies fruit acids, that help keep the system in good order.

Go to your grocer today and order a package of delicious Grape-Nuts. You will find that it will digest more readily than most other cereals, and it will "stay by" you longer—because it's so richly nourishing.

Women Are Urged To World Vision By Noted Speaker

Mrs. Florence Eddy, of New York, in an address yesterday before a gathering of Y. W. C. A. directors and workers, touched upon an important phase of the address she will make this afternoon at the home of Mrs. Albert Thornton before city federation leaders.

She approached the matter through a local medium. It was at the home of Mrs. Archibald Davis, president of the local Y. W. C. A., and Mrs. Eddy brought the civic pride of her audience to instant attention when she declared that one of the greatest lessons that she has heard delivered since the late war was that by Dr. Arthur M. Jones of the Ponce de Leon Baptist church, last Sunday morning.

True Americanism: "Dr. Jones preaches the only true Americanism of today," declared the national secretary, who has recently returned to this country after an international survey of world conditions of women made for the national association. The speaker said that Dr. Jones struck the keynote when he said that America cannot live unto herself as a nation and that she can not stay apart from other countries and be a great nation suzerain unto herself.

Mrs. Eddy said that, while making her international survey she found that women throughout the world are saying that war is not a necessary evil, but a nation is victorious or conquered, war is too great a price to pay. The women whom Mrs. Davis had invited to hear Mrs. Eddy were told that they must become vitally interested in the questions that are affecting the welfare of the women in foreign countries. The foreign women since the war are going out more and more as wage earners and are reaching out for a broader life and living conditions. The speaker told the story of how the national Y. W. C. A. is now working in thirty-five countries helping the native women to train for their own Y. W. C. A. and helping them to establish their associations, after which the national secretaries quietly withdraw and leave the native women to carry on the work.

Invited to receive with Mrs. Davis at her Tuesday afternoon tea that honored Mrs. Eddy were the following Y. W. C. A. directors: Mrs. Samuel Lumpkin, Mrs. S. P. Francis, Mrs. E. C. Kozka, Mrs. Plato Durham, Mrs. E. C. Callaway and Miss Genevieve Saunders. Mrs. George F. Street poured tea.

Mrs. Blythe Is Honored

Mrs. James Blythe, of Boston, guest of Mrs. Brooks Morgan, is being welcomed back to Atlanta with lovely parties given for her by many of her childhood friends. Tuesday morning Mrs. Joel Hurt, Jr., was hostess at a bridge-luncheon in honor of Mrs. Blythe, given at the home of her mother, Mrs. Rutherford Lipcomb, on Peachtree road. The rooms were fragrant with spring blossoms. A small group of friends were invited to meet Mrs. Blythe.

Mrs. Walter Colquitt was hostess Tuesday afternoon, at a bridge-tea in honor of Mrs. Blythe.

The pretty home on Ponce de Leon avenue was lovely with bowls of spring flowers. First prize was a wall vase; a perfume bottle was given for consolation prize, and a perfume bottle was also presented to the guest of honor.

The lace covered tea-table held a large bowl of spring flowers, peach blossoms, apple blossoms and jonquills, and silver candlesticks with green shaded tapers were used.

Invited to meet Mrs. Blythe were Mrs. Brooks Morgan, Mrs. Robert Troutman, Mrs. Louis Gregg, Mrs. Hunter Muse, Mrs. Thomas Dunham, Mrs. Jack Thissen, Mrs. Rucker McCarty, Mrs. Royston Cabanis, Mrs. Ewell Gay, Mrs. Joel Hurt, Jr., Mrs. Henry Tompkins, Mrs. Stewart Brown, Mrs. Stewart Witham, Mrs. Ewing Dean, Mrs. Walter Elcock, Mrs. Joseph Dunson, Jr., of La-Grange; Mrs. Henry Peoples, Jr., Mrs. Edwin Peoples, Mrs. Dorothy Harman, Stringfellow, Mrs. George McCarty, Mrs. James Ragan, Mrs. Floyd McRae, Jr., Mrs. Glenville Giddings, Mrs. Lillie Peoples and Miss Helen McCarty.

Mrs. Dobbs Is Honored

Mrs. Burney Dobbs, of Athens, was honor guest Tuesday afternoon at a bridge-tea given for her by her hostess, Mrs. Rogers B. Toy. The green and white of St. Patrick's day was effectively used in decorations, which consisted of silver bowls of narcissi, bordered with ferns, with tally cards of shamrocks and Irish harps. Playing cards were given for top score at each table.

Mrs. Dobbs wore a blue lace gown, over blue satin. Her hair wore black satin combined with chiffon, beaded in henna. Miss Jamie Winn and Miss Wickliffe Wurm assisted in entertaining.

Invited to meet the honor guest were Mrs. John Turner Carson, Mrs. John R. Simpson, Jr.; Mrs. Louis McKoin, Mrs. Thomas Adams, Mrs. Booklover Toy, Mrs. Conly Swanson, Mrs. George Walker, Mrs. Mark Pentecost, Mrs. Howard Jones, Mrs. Albert Collier, Mrs. Bernard Boykin, Mrs. Lott Warren, Jr., Mrs. Charles Pottinger, Mrs. Ell McCord, Mrs. Carl Fischer and Mrs. Alfred Papp.

Miss Tannahill Given Bridge

Miss Louise Tannahill, of Asheville, N. C., charming guest of Mrs. J. Walter Mason, was honor guest Tuesday afternoon at a bridge party given for her by Mrs. Joseph L. Hodgson, at her home on Juniper street.

The guest prize was of Madeira handkerchiefs; the first prize was a set of bridge table numbers, and the consolation prize consisted of a quilt pen and holder.

Spring flowers in low bowls decorated the rooms where the game was played. The tea table centerpiece was a silver bowl of jonquills and narcissi.

Mrs. James Logan assisted her daughter in receiving the guests. The guests invited for the tea were Miss Tannahill, Mrs. Walter Mason, Mrs. Julian Prude, Mrs. Charles Dowman, Mrs. E. L. Horton, Mrs. P. D. Yates, Mrs. Joe Burton and Miss Margaret Horton. The players were joined at tea by Mrs. George Westmoreland and Mrs. W. M. Patterson.

Alliance Francaise To Have Meeting

The tercentenary of Moliere, father of French comedy, will be celebrated all over America by the Alliance Francaise, and at the meeting of the Alliance Francaise of Atlanta Thursday afternoon at 8:30 o'clock at the Carnegie library, Mr. Lorisana, vice president of the Alliance Francaise of Atlanta, will speak about Moliere and his works and will recite several parts of the finest masterpieces of this playwright and comedian.

The Constitution's Novel-a-Week
The Flockmaster of Poison Creek

By GEORGE WASHINGTON OGDEN

Next Week, "The Valley of the Sun,"

By William McCoy

(Copyright, 1922, for The Constitution)

Mackenzie got up, walked a few steps away, turned back presently, his temper in hand.

"It's not a question open to discussion between gentlemen," he said.

Reid blinked up at him, an odd leer on his sophisticated face.

"I'm not going over to relieve that punk," he announced, "not without orders from Sullivan. If he gets off you'll have to relieve him yourself."

"All right, Earl," said Mackenzie, good-naturedly. "I'll go."

"You'll be half an hour nearer Joan's camp—she'll have that much longer to stay," said Reid, his mean leer creeping into his wide, thin lips again.

Mackenzie turned slowly to look him squarely in the eyes. He stood so a few seconds, Reid coloring in his heart, the silent rebuke.

"I've heard enough of that to last me the rest of your three years," Mackenzie said, something as hard as a stone in a cushion under his calm voice.

Reid jerked his hip in his peculiar twisting manner to shift his pistol belt, turned and walked away.

CHAPTER VII.
Only One Jacob.

Joan came sliding over the next morning from Reid's camp, her head of Mackenzie's shift to oblige her. She was bareheaded, the sun in her warm hair, but hanging on her saddle-horn, Joan was distracted again that day, her eyes fixed often in dreamy speculation as her teacher explained something that she found hard, against her wonted aptness, to understand. When the rather distant lesson came to an end, Joan signed, strapping her books in a way that seemed to tell that she was weary of them.

"I sent and got a Bible from the mail-order house," she said, looking up.

"Has it come already?"

"Charley got it yesterday. I found that story about Jacob and Rachel, it's awful short."

"But it tells a good deal, Joan."

Joan seemed thinking over how much the short story really told, her eyes far away.

"It was unlucky for Earl that he killed Matt Hall," she said, taking up another thread of thought in her discursive, unfixed humor of that day.

"It's unfortunate for any man to have to kill another, I guess. But it has to be done sometimes."

"Matt deserved it, all right, but it turned Earl's head, haven't you noticed? He thinks that's many a time, each side of the range, herding everybody between his legs."

"He'll get over it in a little while."

"He's not got over it, he's holding him down when the high winds begin to blow."

"Dad says he's got the lonesomeness."

"More of the cussedness."

"Her words warmed Mackenzie like a precious cordial. At every one of them in derision of Reid his heart jumped, seeming to move him by its tremendous vibration a little nearer to him."

"He'll never stay here through the winter," Joan predicted. "Give him a touch of twenty-two below, and the snow on a high wind, and send him out to bed down the sheep where it'll blow over them! I can see him right now. You'll do it all right, and I'll have to, but we're not like Earl. Earl's got summer blood."

Mackenzie took her hand, feeling it tremble a little, seeing her face grow pale.

"Yes, Joan, you and I are of different blood," he said. "He can't have you—Earl Reid can't have you—over in this world."

"So it was out, and from his own mouth, and all his reserve was nothing, and his silent pleading but as an idle word. Joan was looking at him with wide and serious eyes."

"Earl Reid?"

"Earl Reid," he nodded. "I'd be a coward to give you up to him."

Joan was not trembling now. She put her free hand over Mackenzie's where it gripped her fingers so hard that Earl Reid might have been on the opposite side of her, trying to drive her away from him by force. She looked up into his eyes and smiled.

"I thought dad had made some kind of a deal with him," she said, nodding in her wise way. "They didn't tell me anything, but I knew from the way dad looked at me out of the corners of his eyes that he had a trade of some kind on. Tell me about it, Joan."

There was no explanation left to Mackenzie but the degrading truth, and he gave it to her as Tim Sullivan had given it to him.

"They had their nerve!" said Joan, flushed with resentment.

"It's an old, old, old story, as far as it affects you, Joan," Mackenzie said, catching his brows together in a frown of denial. "Reid can't have you, not even if he comes into two million when the old man dies."

"No," said Joan softly, her hand striking his, her eyes downcast, the glow of the new-old dawn upon her cheek. "There's only room for one Jacob on this range."

"I thought I owed it to Reid, as a matter of honor between men, to step aside and let him have you according to the plan. But that was a mistake."

"I saw something was holding you back, Joan," said the wise Joan. "Mackenzie started as if she had thrust him with a needle."

"So you saw through me, did you, Joan?"

"When you called me Rachel that day."

"I nearly told you that time," he said.

"You might have, Joan," said she, a little accusingly. "You didn't owe him anything then—that was before he came."

"I respected you too much to take advantage of your coming to me that way for your lessons day by day, Joan. I had to tell it to keep it back."

"I tried to pull it out of you," Joan said, as serious as a penitent, although there was a smile breaking on her lips as she turned her face away.

"I'd never want to do anything, or say anything, that would lower your respect for me one little degree," Joan said, still clinging to her hand as though he feared he had not quite won her, and must hold her fast by his side to the final word.

"I know you wouldn't, Joan," said she, her voice shaking a little, and her hand beneath her breast.

"I would want to—to go as far as Jacob went that first time he saw Rachel," said he in desperation, his eyes lightning on her fingers, even resting on his brow. "I wouldn't want to—I'd want to, all right, but I wouldn't even—"

Joan looked up at him with calm, mild eyes, with pale cheeks, with smiling lips, a flutter in her heart that made her weak. She smiled, and took to help him to his climax, but she held, not bolder than himself, indeed, and he was shaking like a sick man in the sun.

"Unless I could make it holy, unless you could understand it so, I wouldn't even—I wouldn't so much as—" He took her face between his hands and bent over her, and a glad little sob trembled between Joan's lips as she rested her hands on his shoulders for the benediction of his kiss.

Joan did not stay to help him bring in the sheep that day, for there was nothing left for her to wonder over, or stand wistfully by her saddle waiting to receive. She waved him goodbye from the hilltop and went on, the understanding of his fortune growing on him as he recalled her eyes in that moment when she closed them to his salute upon her lips. She gave up that first kiss that she had ever yielded to any man, as though he had reached down and plucked it out of her heart.

He rounded his sheep to their hillside, and made his fire, a song in his heart, but his lips sealed, for he was a silent man. And at dusk there came riding into the camp a man, whose coat he had ever yielded to, or stand wistfully by her saddle waiting to receive. She waved him goodbye from the hilltop and went on, the understanding of his fortune growing on him as he recalled her eyes in that moment when she closed them to his salute upon her lips. She gave up that first kiss that she had ever yielded to any man, as though he had reached down and plucked it out of her heart.

"That's a long time to hold a cold trail. Rabbit must be some on the track."

"You can't beat them Indians folerin' a man if they set their heads to it. Well, it's all off with the widow lady at Four Corners now."

Swan immediately took part in the melee of gauding, rolling, rearing dogs, quickly snubbing them to obedience. He stood looking stonily at Mackenzie, unmoved by anger, unflushed by exertion.

"You're running your sheep over as that, it's you," Mackenzie told him. "Get 'em out of here and keep 'em out."

"I got fifteen hundred in that band—you'll have to help me cut 'em out," said Swan.

"You had about seven hundred," Mackenzie returned, dispassionately, although it broke on him suddenly what the big flockmaster was trying to put through. Counting on Mackenzie's greenness, Swan had prepared this trap days ahead.

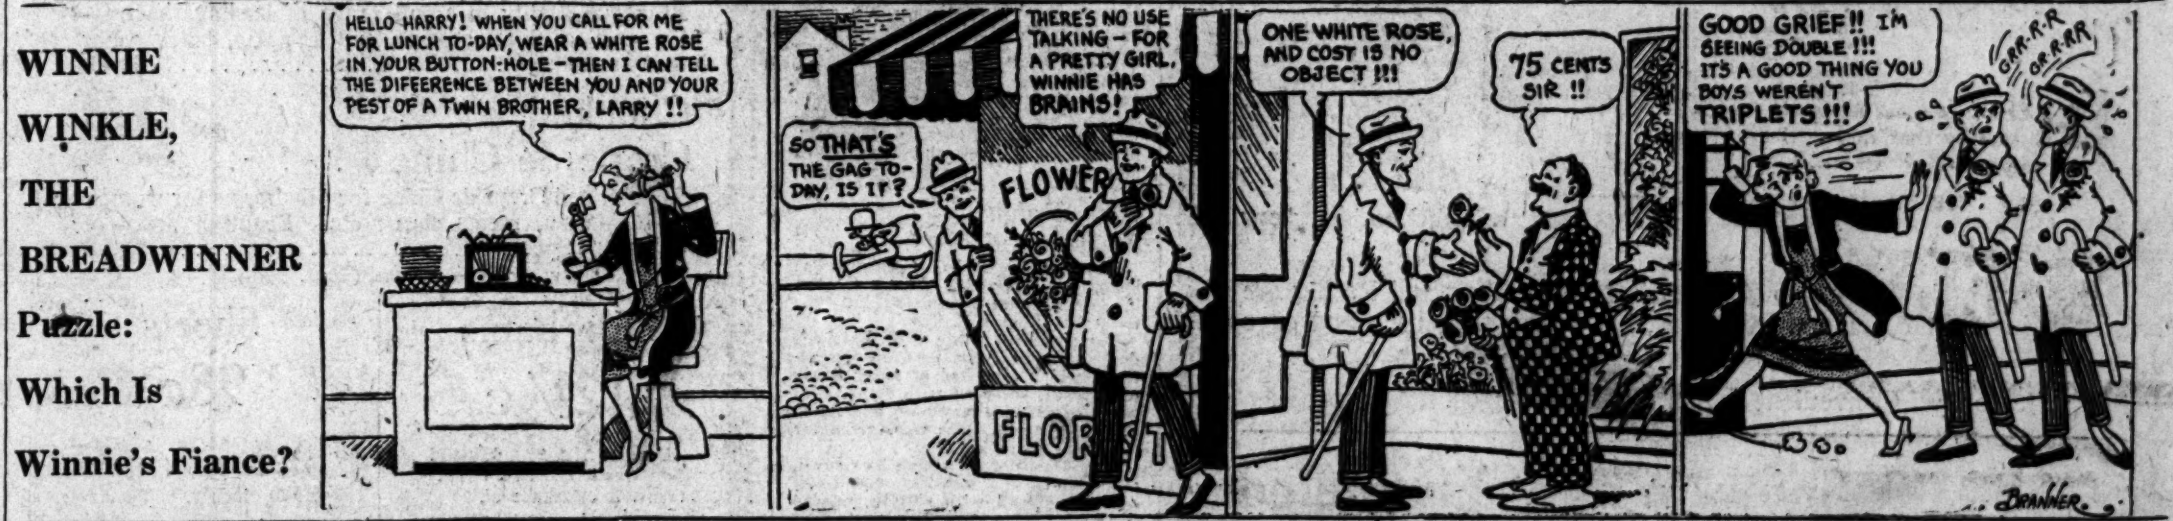

"I'll help you cut out as many as you had," Mackenzie said, "but you'll not take more than seven hundred this trip."

GRANDMA, THE DEMON CHAPERONE

ONE REEL COMEDY

Tim O'Dowd Wins But Fans Were Disappointed With His Showing

Need of Boxing Commission Shown by This Fight—Semi-Windup a Great Go.

BY FUZZY WOODRUFF.

Tim O'Dowd won the closest sort of hairline decision from Artie Simons, the New Orleans veteran, at the American Legion show at the box fight club at Hunter and Forsyth streets last night. Personally, I believe it was an immoral victory. O'Dowd could have won conclusively in a manner pleasing to the crowd, if he had followed his natural impulses and gone out and fought. As it was, he followed instructions from his corner, adopted a shell, and made the windup affair of a fine evening's entertainment a good deal more draggy than Atlanta fans are accustomed to when Tim is in the ring.

O'DOWD MISSES AN OPPORTUNITY.

It looked to me like Tim missed a golden opportunity to establish himself as a prime Atlanta favorite, Atlanta being addicted to fighting men. He, or his manager, missed the opportunity a mile. Pitted against a boy more experienced and his superior as a boxer, for some unknown reason, it was elected to make a defensive fight of the ten rounds, and O'Dowd would have been a beaten boy had he not on occasions lost his head and disobeyed instructions and cut loose with some honest-to-goodness fighting.

It was only on these occasions that he hit Simons hard enough to dent butter. It's true he was making Simons miss and hit boxing gloves, but he was doing mighty little for himself.

CAREFUL FIGHTING RUINS SHOWS.

On the face of things, it seems to me that the fight colony here has suffered, acutely from Young Stripling's success. Its members have seen Stripling play to his houses and box carefully and withdraw without fire, and all the rest of them are now taking too much care of their precious selves.

We all thought that O'Dowd was going to develop into a real red-blooded, two-fisted fighter. Last night he looked like the most timid sort of a boxer. Simons wasn't good enough to break through his defense and the decision was proper enough, though I actually think a "no contest" decision with the purse of both combatants tied up would have been better. The need of a boxing commission, which would make such action possible, was never more clearly demonstrated than in that bout.

SEMI-WINDUP A GREAT GO.

The semi-windup had all the elements of a "heavyweight" fight. It brought together Jack Denham and Millard McGowan, the highly touted young heavyweight from Dublin, Me., who was over-instructed from his corner, where Pa Stripling was officiating. He elected to run away from Denham after Denham was a gory mass from a split eye, received early in the encounter. Denham fought courageously and desperately, and after the seventh round when he sent McGowan to the floor, earned every session. The decision of Referee Johnny Glynn was boobyed by some members of the crowd. I don't see how it could have been anything else. Denham did all the fighting. If it had been a footrace, McGowan would have won by a good state mile.

In the first bout of the evening, a little better than usual. Bill Dale and Dixie Walker fought a two-round draw. Dale taking the first, Dale the third and the other two being even. In the next scarp Peewee Burns and Homer Powell fought six rounds. Powell winning. If Powell's fighting were only half as ferocious as his fighting face he would be one of the greatest that ever stepped into a squared circle.

During the last 300 years there have been more changes in hat fashions than in any other part of men's attire.

FIRST GAME AT THE BAY

BY COLONEL CLAUKE.

New Orleans-Bay St. Louis, Miss., March 14.—(Special.)—Atlanta's Crackerjacks won their first battle of the 1922 season today, beating Jupiter Plovers at a winner in a race for a good, healthy workout. The tail end of a storm which struck northern Mississippi reached here in the shape of a heavy rain. It came, however, only after the ball players had been on the field for nearly two hours.

The workout was entirely satisfactory to Field Boss Roy Egan, who says the program will call for a steady grind, Sundays excepted, until it is time for the club to break camp. How long the Crackerjacks will remain here, of course, has not been definitely decided. This will be determined by Manager Frank, who will be taking a peek at his men shortly.

Two New Arrivals.

The Crackerjacks found two more arrivals during the day. Pitcher Bolt, a Georgia State, and Freddie Grant, joined the flock, and went through the Crackerjacks' initial "Dutch" Bernsen, purchased from Birmingham during the off season, has not reported as yet. Bernsen is a former star of the Crackerjacks, otherwise known as the "Barnes" team. Bernsen, however, is expected along shortly, and no fears are entertained by the Crackerjacks that he will be a "business career." The only athletes now missing are Wingo, Bernsen and Phil Bedgood. Second baseman Ritter, due today, did not arrive. He is expected in camp tomorrow.

Eliam and Mayer have arranged the first fishing trip of the season for the players Sunday. It is intended as a diversion. A boat will be chartered to carry 24 persons. Those who have the "usual line" will be taught how to bait by Eliam and Mayer. Both pioneers, so far as Bay St. Louis fishing is concerned. Kenneman, who had a brief whirl with the Crackerjacks last spring and later sold to the New Orleans Pelicans after serving time in the Georgia State league, stopped off to visit the gang today before proceeding to New Orleans to join the Dobbs-Heinemann flock.

BASEBALL PRACTICE DAILY AT TECH

This is the weather for baseball. If Tech can only get in a week or two of practice in this warm, the team will look entirely different. In this day and time, when the team is so much an important factor in the college, it is absolutely essential to get a bunch that can play together. And that is what K. C. Clay is trying to do. He is looking out for the best possible combination. When he finds it, he will have his ball club for the year.

There are only one or two positions in doubt so far. It looks like Eddie Morgan has put third base in his pocket and walked off and he has a mighty good understudy in Johnnie Baun. Next year, Johnnie ought to step right out. At short the battle is still on. The principals are Minnie Hill and Joey Jennings. Hitting is the thing, and so far Joey has a slight edge. Baby Roane at second looks good. Baby is getting his eye now, and is doing some real playing. "Skinny" Bernsen stands ready to do anything should happen. It's still a toss-up around the base sack, though Toke has been hitting mighty hard of late.

In the field it looks like the Barron, Ingram, Settle combination will be replaced by a Barron, Ingram, Griffin trio. Griffin made his debut last year and was one of the heaviest hitters on the team.

People in this town who crave baseball will have their first opportunity of satisfying their longing Thursday, when Ty Cobb brings his crew of Detroit sluggers to Grant field.

Last season, the Detroit team averaged over three-hundred in hitting, an outstanding record. This year he has his some-bunch back and some new material. Blue, a star from the Pacific coast, and John Mahardt, the Notre Dame halfback. In meeting this ball-pasting aggregation, Tech's pitchers ought to have a rough time.

It will be a great feat for the ball-bungers, for Ty expects to open up with his heavy artillery.

It must not be thought that Tech is not going to paste that old apple a little, for the Detroit pitching staff is not up to mid-season form and Tech will have the opportunity of seeing a ball once in a while that at least looks as if they can hit it.

Tech is very proud of the opportunity of playing the Tigers. This is the first college team that the Tigers have played for years, and the waiving of this rule for the benefit of Tech is much appreciated both by the team and the school.

LONG TRAINING HOURS RULE IN CUB CAMP

Chicago, March 14.—Warm hands' hours have been established for the Chicago Cubs at their Catalina Island training camp. The Cubs went to work again yesterday with a lot of kidding ringing in their ears as a result of straight defeats at the hands of the Vernon and Portland Pacific Coast league teams.

ALLEGED CON MEN PLEAD NOT GUILTY

Orlando, Fla., March 14.—The four alleged confidence men arrested last week were put on trial in criminal court this morning. They pleaded not guilty. H. F. Mole, attorney for three of the defendants, asserted he could templat putting all of them on the witness stand in their own defense. Judge Warlick, however, fixed bail for each at $10,000 which they did not furnish. The men are William Banks, Harry Haynes, W. H. Nagel and John King.

ANNISTON POLICE SEARCH FOR BURGLARS

Anniston, Ala., March 14.—(Special.)—Wide and diligent search is being made here by city and county officers for burglars who entered four homes Sunday night, stealing window curtains, hall runners, art squares, shoes, watches, money, clothing and miscellaneous articles easily moved.

The series of burglaries was discovered when the occupants of the homes awoke Monday morning, some confusion being in evidence at all of the places.

In some of the remote parts of Switzerland a maid becomes engaged to a man if she accepts from him a bouquet of edelweiss, the being that the man has risked his life to obtain the flowers for the woman he loves.

Ga. Tech vs. Tigers Tomorrow Ty Cobb Will Appear In Person

Tomorrow afternoon at Grant field, Ty Cobb and his aggregation of ball tossers, will play the Tech varsity one game of baseball. On Friday this program will be repeated.

Cobb, in this battle will make his first appearance in his native state as a big league manager, and he is bringing down his entire team from Augusta, where they have been in training for several weeks. After these two games Cobb and his Tigers will return to Augusta.

The games on both dates will be called at 4 p.m. and the admission of 75 cents will be charged.

Much interest is being shown in the appearance of the Tigers, because Atlanta knew the Tigers under Hughie Jennings, and now that the team is managed by a Georgian, incidentally by one of the greatest ball players that ever wore a spit shade, they are anxious to see whether he has been able to impress his ideas and tactics on his organization.

The last the Tigers will be one of the most sensational playing teams in the major leagues.

The diamond at Grant field is one of the best in the south, and the Detroit team will not be forced to watch for lead hops and other unpleasant things that are usually in evidence in training trip games. This diamond is one that Cobb can cut loose on in perfect safety.

Wesley Collins will probably pitch the opening game against the Tech leaguers, with Harry Allison, a southpaw ready to take up the burden at any time. This will be Allison's first game with Tech and the close followers of the game predict that he will be a performer of the same caliber of "Sunshine" Thompson.

Thompson will face the Tigers in the Friday game. This chap has not yet made a regular game since coming to Tech. However, he is facing a test on Friday that has the big-timers worried, and he will have to pitch all ball that he knows to hold the Detroit team reasonably safe.

BASEBALL BABE RUTH AT AUBURN YANK CAPTAIN

BY EMMETT SIZEMORE.

Auburn, Ala., March 14.—(Special.)—With two more days before the opening game Coach Mike Donahue is ready for the initial tilt with the 1922 baseball schedule. Babe Ruth is the captain of the Auburn team, and he is facing a test on Friday that has the big-timers worried, and he will have to pitch all ball that he knows to hold the Detroit team reasonably safe.

Incidentally, the tiny manager this turns to his advantage and to the advantage of the team, a factor which made for dissension in the campaign of 1921. Ruth occasionally differs from Huggins on baseball questions, and it was noticeable that as Babe thought so, thought a considerable clique of the players, which was to the disadvantage of Huggins and not conducive to team spirit. With the new responsibility Ruth may become more tolerant of Huggins' strategy.

Ruth spent several hours wrestling with the clauses of his income tax law, but finally got it straightened out into what he hopes is the proper shape for submission to the collector of internal revenue.

AMATEUR UMPS MEET TONIGHT AT "Y"

A meeting of umpires who will do duty in the amateur leagues here this year is called to meet Mr. Barter, umpire in chief, at the Y. M. C. A. tonight at 8 o'clock.

Several items of importance will be discussed and plans for the season will be worked out, as much as possible. The umpires are to take this opportunity of picking up extra money on Saturdays during the coming ball season are urged to attend this meeting.

Here's New Scheme To Foil Sleuths On Liquor Trail

Newark, N. J., March 14.—Local cafe owners have devised a new difficulty for enforcement officers. Deputy Police Chief McCall said today, "Here's the way the scheme is worked at Newark bars."

A thirty-one enters. The man behind the apron appraises him and decides he needs what he wants. The thirty-one is told to stand close to the bar, hold his hand on his side, throw back his head and open his mouth. Then the desired liquid is poured down the waiting throat.

"Now, there's no way for a policeman to take the evidence out with him," complained Deputy McCall. "We've got to figure a scheme to beat this new device."

BOMBS ARE THROWN ON LISBON STREETS

Lisbon, March 14.—Bomb explosion reported finding portraits of Lenin and Trotsky.

The government is taking strong action to prevent the projected social bombing, details regarding the plans for which were found in the possession of Oporto syndicates. There have been more than one hundred arrests.

By Matrimonial Bureau.

As "Howard Wilson," Moore is said to have married Irene Hale, three years ago in Chicago. He lost her through a marriage bureau in a southern state, he said. He deserted her, taking with him $15,000, it is alleged. In June of last year he is said to have married Laura Herlihy, of Peoria, Ill., under the name of George Churchill.

His last matrimonial venture was with Miss Evans, of Vincennes, Ind.

Moore is 32 years old. He will be arraigned in city court as soon as detectives check minor details of the confession he is said to have made.

WALTER CAMP ON NEW RULES

BY WALTER CAMP.

New York, March 14.—The recent football rules changes will leave the general character of the game little changed. The balance of attack and defense will be well maintained but there will be some quite noticeable effects produced by the changes and these will be watched with extreme interest during the coming season.

Officials have been placed upon easier ground in judging shift plays by the new rule that provides for a definite stop and a new start from a position of rest after the shift has been made. The effect of this rule will be to curtail somewhat the large line shifts and bring into greater importance the smaller backfield shifts. The new rule provides that if one man is in motion before the ball is in play, he must, if coming from the line, be 5 yards back when the ball is snapped. This will practically eliminate the plan of sending an end out and have him come sweeping in with a smash on the tackle but it will still permit of a back dropping back smartly for a quick kick.

Had the rule regarding a goal kick from touchdown been adopted as originally suggested and provided for a play from scrimmage 25 or even 15 yards from the goal line, we should have seen no attempt made to do any thing but kick the ball into the end zone. But with the distance set at 5 yards, there will be some essays at trick runs and forward passes by teams not possessing an accurate drop kicker. On the whole, however, the kicks will be the choice.

The penalty of 15 yards loss imposed against the so-called "screening" of the forward pass will have a beneficial effect and will give the defense a better chance to intercept passes.

Permission given the side losing the toss—to elect whether to kick off or receive the kick off—is a slight concession to the loser and was undoubtedly brought about by statistics furnished by Mr. Coffin showing the great preponderance of victories by teams which kicked the toss.

Although the proposal by Tad Jones that a man once taken from the game be prohibited from going in again was not adopted, it is a step forward. The player taken out after the intermission and this was a step forward. The player taken out after the intermission and this was a step forward.

It will be more expensive in future to go on "kicking" for time out after the game, for the stakes are not to be moved when the 2-yard penalty is imposed and it simply means that the team asking for time must be sure to secure first down. This should speed up the game.

SPRING PRACTICE AT GEORGIA TECH

BY JOHN STATON.

If you were to come out to the lower end of Grant field any afternoon, you would think that football season was in full swing. Coach Alex is getting down to brass tacks on the spring football situation now. All the material from the freshman team is being put into the varsity and scrub squads of last season are on hand every afternoon from 4 to 5 o'clock. Yesterday he had the boys going down the line and right field for the Yanks and the bucking frame all over the field. Then he called them around him and gave a fifteen minute lecture on the line position of the game. He will keep up this practice until late in the spring.

He had one team running a few signals just to keep from getting rusty. Just a tip, McConnell and Davis for fullback. McConnell came to Tech from the University of Virginia and he has served his year on the scrubs. Next year he will be eligible and he is going to make some tackle step lively.

Oscar Davis was taken to St. Joseph's hospital Monday night in a serious condition. He was operated on for appendicitis at 1 o'clock. He is doing well, but can't see anyone yet. Oscar had an attack of appendicitis during the season, but would not consent to an operation. He finished out the year and thought his trouble had left him. He became very ill Monday night and it was necessary to operate at once.

"PEP" YOUNG'S ARM BACK IN SHAPE

Detroit, March 14.—Ty Cobb, who has been unimpaired names between the Tigers yannigans and regulars at the Augusta training camp, has noted with satisfaction the manner in which "Pep" Young is covering his old position at second base. His accurate throwing indicates he has overcome the difficulty with his arm.

Containing a quart of clear, pure water to every foot, the "water vine," a black, snake-like, leafless stem, dropping from the mahogany trees around which it climbs, is one of the wonders of the Amazon jungle. When the stem is cut the water spurts out in a stream.

CHARITY REALIZES $73,000 ON FIGHT

New York, March 14.—The cleanup of $73,000 for the New York milk fund through the Greb-Gibbons fight at Madison Square garden Monday night brings the total of charity receipts in four great shows to $225,900.

When Tex Rickard was head of the garden he donated not only the rent but the heat and light, and the wages of the big house staff to put on the Leonard-Mitchell fight for France, the Jackson-Kanask fight for Irish relief, and the Bronx hospital benefit, with Benny Leonard in an exhibition match. Recently, he gave over the garden again for the American Legion show featuring Willie Jackson and Charley White.

The charities have used up some of the most attractive fight cards in the game. White and Jackson, who boxed at the legion show, put up one of the greatest fights of the year. The Leonard-Mitchell scrap is memorable, and the Greb-Gibbons bout was another great one.

Although Rickard is now out of the garden, it was he who arranged for the Greb-Gibbons fight.

JIM JEFFRIES PASSES THROUGH DALLAS

Dallas, Texas, March 14.—Jim Jeffries, passing through here on his way to look over his oil properties in Mexico and Kautzman counties, declared that Jack Dempsey now stands invincible as the result of the Greb-Gibbons bout in New York.

"Gibbons seemed to be the best of the bunch," said Jeff, "but if Greb outpointed him, he is out of it. Greb is a good boy, but would not have a show with Dempsey. Jack keeps in condition all the time, and will take a wonderful wallop to knock him out."

Steve O'Neill, catcher, and several other members of the Cleveland Indians, training here, met Jeffries and discussed fights and baseball and oil with him.

DAVIS CUP ENTRIES NUMBER THIRTEEN

New York, March 14.—Hawaii and Rumania have entered oil with late minute challenges for the Davis cup, making thirteen challenging nations, the largest field ever entered. Tech is a good boy, but would not have a show with Dempsey. Jack keeps in condition all the time, and will take a wonderful wallop to knock him out."

The Rumanian challenge came from Nicolas Mitsu, of the Rumanian legion, London, who was one of the best players in Europe last summer.

FIRST GAME FOR TIGERS

Augusta, Ga., March 14.—(Special.)—Tyus Raymond Cobb, of this city, the world's greatest ball player, will appear in his native state as a major league manager for the first time Thursday, when he will lead the Detroit Tigers against Georgia Tech's varsity team at Grant field in Atlanta.

This game will be the first contest for the Tigers this year. They will also meet Georgia Tech on Friday. The Tigers' spring schedule calls for a game with Rochester International leaguers at Augusta on Saturday as the first contest of the season.

Georgia Tech will be the only college or university team that Detroit meets this year. It will be the first that Detroit has met in a number of years. Several schools wanted games with the Tigers this spring, but all were turned down with the exception of Tech.

Cobb's reason for consenting to the two games in Atlanta is based upon Georgia Tech's reputation in the east. There the "Golden Fleece" is spoken of with reverence when college athletic matters are mentioned. Down here in Georgia the team is well known but not better than in the north and east.

The Detroit owners have for several years refused to meet college teams on the grounds that no benefits could be derived from sending a major league team against a college club. That this rule has been waived in the instance of Georgia Tech is another proof of Georgia Tech's reputation in the north.

When Georgia Tech and Detroit meet one thing is certain—the most colorful club in the majors will oppose the most colorful team on the college diamond.

CARDINAL RECRUIT PITCHES GREAT BALL

Orange, Texas, March 14.—The ivory polishers in the Cardinals camp here are writing letters home about a huge kid pitcher named "Fast Ball Billy" Barnes, a semi-pro player from Oklahoma, Ill., and former team mate of Roy Davis, now with the Browns. Branch Rickey, manager of the St. Louis Nationals, is much interested in Barnes, and hopes of bringing him along as a standby pitcher.

MACK PICKS FOUR FOR ATHLETICS LINEUP

Philadelphia, March 14.—Connie Mack has definitely selected four men from his list of candidates trying out at the Athletics' Eagle Park camp. They are Bing Miller and Frank McGowan, outfielders; Berger, a catcher, and Heine Scheer, infielder. Contracts will be tendered them. Mack expects to keep five outfielders.

HEADS OF POLICE BOARD RENAMED

At 10 o'clock Tuesday night the 1921 police board adjourned sine die, and five minutes later the 1922 commission was called to order with not a single change in its personnel from that of the 1921 board.

Dr. J. C. Vaughan, chairman; T. M. Sheffield, vice chairman, and W. C. Stradley, secretary, were unanimously re-elected to serve another year. W. H. Evans and W. A. McKinney, two former policemen, were elected to the supernumerary force. Both officers were connected with the department for several years prior to their resignation more than a year ago. The resignation of Officer W. A. Pierce was read and accepted.

The board decided to hold a special meeting next Tuesday night for the purpose of trying several officers, and of passing on several applications for positions.

A triplicate method of preferring charges against offenders was adopted on motion of Commissioner McJannet. Under the old plan when an officer made charges he issued the only copy to the defendant. The triplicate system will provide an original copy for the defendant, a duplicate to be filed at police headquarters and a triplicate copy to be retained by the arresting officer.

RAIN TO CONTINUE WITH COOL WEATHER

Rain which began last night will continue to fall today, according to the forecast made from the local station of the United States weather bureau. Showers scheduled for the early part of the day will bring the temperature down several degrees, it was said.

Late Tuesday night Jupiter Pluvius washed the streets better than the city water wagons have ever done. A noticeable feature of the rain was that it was intermittent, each shower lasting about 15 minutes.

Tuesday was unusually warm for March. The highest temperature recorded during the day was 62 degrees, approaching the warmest weather that may be expected for this part of the year.

National Red Cross Asked to Give Help To Dixie Chapters

The southern division of the American Red Cross, with headquarters in Atlanta, has requested the National Red Cross headquarters in Washington, to appropriate $43,000 during the present half year to assist thirty-five chapters throughout the south in aiding non-resident ex-service men and their dependents.

According to Harry L. Hopkins, southern division manager of the Red Cross, the national headquarters has during the past six months given sufficient money each month to the Atlanta chapter for this work, and has assured a similar appropriation during a part of this year. This money has been used to aid the ex-service men who come to Atlanta in a practically destitute condition in order to get aid of the U. S. veterans' bureau or at the veterans' hospital, No. 48.

Every one of the thirty-five chapters for which the appropriation is asked has in its jurisdiction either a district or subdistrict office of the U. S. veterans' bureau, a U. S. marine hospital or a U. S. veterans' bureau training center, and sometimes two or more of them. The U. S. veterans' bureau, at Charleston, S. C., however, Charleston was included in the list because many ex-service men are taken care of at either the U. S. naval hospital or in the contract hospitals.

Four chapters in each of the states of Georgia, Mississippi, North Carolina and Virginia, and three in each of the states of Florida, Louisiana and South Carolina, and six chapters in each of the states of Alabama and Arkansas are included in the list of thirty-five.

POULTRY BUSINESS ADVANCE IN LYERLY

Lyerly, Ga., March 14.—(Special.) Despite the fact that several car loads of poultry have been shipped from this immediate section during the past 12 months, merchants and produce dealers of Lyerly during last week made a record for handling eggs brought in by the farmers. A canvass of the town shows that more than 100 cases of eggs were bought in one week, or about 3,000 dozen, which, it is believed, is the greatest number of eggs ever handled before in one week's time.

This is direct evidence of the fact that farmers are resorting to the raising of poultry, the majority of which is of pure stock. The poultry that has been sold, it is pointed out, was of the type that is fast disappearing—the scrub, being replaced by thoroughbred fowls, and the eggs are the result.

HARRISON SENTENCED IN BURGLARY CASE

Federal Judge Samuel H. Sibley Tuesday sentenced Elsie Harrison, following his plea of guilty to charges of theft in connection with burglarizing a freight car in the Inman yards more than a year ago, to a year and a day in the federal prison.

Harrison, with a number of other men is said to have broken into the car and carried away a quantity of shoes and wearing apparel. Two of the others arrested in connection with the crime, are now serving prison sentences.

ENTERS GUILTY PLEA IN NARCOTICS CASE

Joe Shepherd, of 187 South Boulevard, who was arrested recently by narcotic inspectors on a charge of violating the Harrison narcotics act, was given a hearing in the office of United States Commissioner Carter Tuesday morning. He pleaded guilty and was placed under $500 bond.

City detectives arrested Joseph Golden, living at 38 Carnegie way, on a similar charge. He will be given a hearing within the next few days. The arrest of Golden is the second of its kind in two days.

BOYS ARE ACCUSED OF ENTERING STORE

Three boys were arrested by police Tuesday night on charges of breaking into the Bradford grocery store, at 80 Carroll street. They gave their names and addresses at Wilks Street, 15, 86 South Moreland avenue; Louis Craig, 14, 19 Tye street, and Clarence Gentry, 12, 40 Rinehart street. They are said to have taken some candy. Their cases will be turned over to the juvenile court.

CONVICT GUARD KILLED IN LAURENS

Dublin, Ga., March 14.—(Special.) George Martin, convict guard on a Laurens county gang, died late this afternoon from a bullet wound from a .32 caliber pistol accidentally fired by Dewey Redfield, at Camp No. 1, near this city, yesterday afternoon. No arrests are expected, as the shooting is known to have been accidental.

Todd Services Today

Funeral services for James B. Todd, who died Tuesday at the residence, his sister, Mrs. S. S. Wallace, 76 Indiana circle, will be held at 4 o'clock Wednesday afternoon at the residence, the Rev. C. J. Harrell, officiating. Burial will be made in Oakland cemetery, with H. M. Patterson & Son in charge of the arrangements. Survivors besides his sister, are two brothers, James C. S. Todd, Philadelphia, and Henry W. Todd, of Atlanta.

workmen in all unions in the United States (including approximately something like 400,000 union miners at this time) comprises only about 9 to 12 per cent of the total labor force of the country.

Accept Adjustment.
The large majority of the 88 to 91 per cent of other unorganized labor has accepted adjustment in whole or in part. They have shown a willingness to bear their share of the denial that such action demands and they are also coming rapidly to understand that there must be given "a fair day's work for a fair day's pay," which, after all, must be the basis of any and all prosperity.

Coal operators do not claim nor would the public probably concede, that they are, and at all times have been, immediate; but they do state and can have shown to designated public bodies authorized to inquire into such matters, that as an industry they have been fully deflated. Only a few of the most fortunate situations companies have made any money throughout 1921. The majority have operated at a loss. The capital invested in the coal producing industry can go no further, nor do we believe the public asks that it shall.

Recent figures presented to the interstate commerce commission in connection with their hearing on the possibility of freight rate reductions showed that commercial coal produced in the United States during 1921 had a margin return above cost of only 10 cents per ton. From this margin must be paid all federal income and excess profits tax and interest on outstanding bonds and borrowed money. In consequence, the industry as a whole has lost heavily during the past twelve months.

Amount Invested.
The United States bureau of census, as of the year 1920, estimates the total investment in bituminous coal mine properties at $1,904,450,123, which, based on the annual production of 1921—407,000,000 tons—means that for every ton of coal produced there was a capital investment of $4.67. An interest rate alone of only 6 per cent would require a 28-cent net return above production cost. Nor have the prices prevailing during this period been at all satisfactory to the public.

Where then, shall the desired reduction in cost of coal to the public come from?

A brief explanation of the real significance of a few of the demands of the miners gives an illuminating index of the inconsistency of their leaders.

Two Pay Methods.
Workmen in coal mines fall into two classes. Those who are paid at their work, constituting in Illinois mines about 56 per cent of the total, and those paid by the day, a fixed amount for 8 hours' work. They are paid the same amount whether a mine gets out 50 per cent or 100 per cent of its capacity. If the miners prevail, the tonnage or rate per ton will be handled by the day wagemen. The net result would be a minimum of 25 per cent increase in cost per ton for day men's work. Plants also must be maintained and fully equipped as to labor force and power 25 per cent more days each year to produce an equal volume of coal.

The demand for time and a half for overtime, double time for Sundays and holidays is likewise without warrant as an established practice in any department of coal mine operation. Punitive overtime is a contract provision that has recently been universally demanded by all union labor. It is not, as the public perhaps believes, sought to prevent alleged abuses by management, but rather to give a basis for collecting a higher pay rate for additional time made necessary by poor or tardy service during the standard period.

To illustrate: The average actual earnings of the total of all grades and classifications of day wage men in Illinois mines is $6.50 per day. On the basis of a 6-hour day this would be at the rate of $1.083 per hour for common unskilled labor. If such a man worked additional time, he would receive $1.64 an hour so that a work period of 8 hours, which is now the standard day, would cost for common labor in the Illinois coal fields $9.84 per day; and should such help be required for 8 hours on Sunday or a holiday it would cost $13.48 for common unskilled labor for such period.

Miners' Earnings.
Claims made that the wages possible to mine workers gives an inadequate annual income are wholly without basis in fact.

Intimate detailed analysis of the actual wages paid to approximately 80,000 Illinois miners shows earnings for the tonnage men at the rate of $11.15 per hour and for unskilled day wage men of 82 cents.

Taking even the extremely low number of work days in mines in 1921—174 days—gives 1,932 working hours a year, which, at a rate of $1.15 per hour, returns to the loader or tonnage man slightly over $1,500 as a flat minimum annual income under the present scale, including in this determination both thin and thick seam coal, and the good and indifferent miner.

Day Men's Income.

Tonnage men to some extent, but day men to a very large extent, have opportunity to work more days than the mine hoists coal. Day men will work an average of 45 more days than the mine hoists coal. A day man that will work when he can is certain of an average of 220 days' work each year, taking the mines as a whole and considering only poor work years.

At the prevalent average earning rates, these skilled day wage men are likewise certain of earning $1,400 per annum as a minimum.

Both these incomes are substantially above those now possible in other basic industries.

As a matter of fact there are large groups not isolated instances of "super-men" as claimed by the miners, who make annual returns ranging from $2,400 to as high as $3,000. On the other hand, we have a very large number of men in mines who make less than $500. Their failure to earn more, however, is their own fault. The quite uniform showing on all coal mines is that 45 per cent of the total number of men on the payroll throughout the year earn 75 per cent of all payroll disbursements. It is a clear case with the operators of "work or get out of the industry."

A Southern Institution

The business activities of the Standard Oil Company (Kentucky) are confined to the South.

The Company has progressed with the marvelous growth of the South and is today a vital part of the business and economic life of its people.

The following data gives some idea of the operations of the Standard Oil Company (Kentucky) in the State of Georgia:

It operates in the State of Georgia, 235 tank stations and service stations.

The Company pays in salaries and commissions to its representatives in the State of Georgia approximately the sum of $920,000.00 per year.

Under the various City, State and County License, Tax and Inspection laws of the State of Georgia, it pays approximately the sum of $530,000.00 per year.

The co-operation, loyalty and efficiency of the Company's employes have contributed largely to the building up and maintaining of its State-wide service to the public.

The Company hopes to merit the public's continued patronage, based upon the superior quality of its products, its efficient organization and its service and tank station system throughout the state.

"The Barnstormer."

As is usual with a Charles Ray photoplay, every foot of "The Barnstormer," his latest production, and which is now being shown at the Metropolitan theater as a First National attraction, was made within the confines of Ray's own studios. It is hard to believe that the two theaters, the stage door and the drug stores, with the sweeping space between them, were all made in such a comparatively small space, but such is the case.

"Flower of the North."

David Smith, one of Vitaphone's most prominent directors, and responsible for the filming of the now famous "Black Beauty," is responsible for filming an adaptation of James Oliver Curwood's widely read novel, "Flower of the North," now at the Criterion theater.

Henry E. Walthall and Pauline Starke head an all-star cast and an entire town was built upon Vitaphone's lot for some mammoth settings of the opening scenes. Everything read novel, "Flower of the North," was made within the confines of Ray's own studios.

"Quo Vadis."

Among the most interesting characters in "Quo Vadis," which comes to the Alpha theater today, is that of Ursus, the giant slave, played by Sig. B. Castellani.

This actor realizes in his appearance, height and mind development, all that one's mind pictures of the man who could uplift tress and conquer a huge bull. Castellani was not an actor until he posed as Ursus in "Quo Vadis." mark he collapsed. Death was due to chronic heart disease, according to Dr. Robinson.

The death of Dr. McKeown cast a pall over his associates, the toastmaster, Dr. George B. Wood, of Rome, adjourning the dinner at once. The body of Dr. McKeown was moved to a local undertaking establishment where it will be prepared for burial and sent to the home in Copperhill. Dr. McKeown is survived by his wife, who resides in the Tennessee city.

In his address Dr. McKeown had commended the Georgia association with which he had just filed his application for membership, on the high standards set in its by-laws. He particularly appealed to the younger members of the association to devote scientific study to the principles of optometry. In his concluding remarks Dr. McKeown said:

"I want to leave this message with you younger men. The profession in which you are engaged is a high one and that you may do justice to it, in the manner that others, older than you have done, let me urge you to be content not, until you have mastered the great scientific fundamentals that have raised optometry to the pinnacle it occupies today."

Italian Opera In Concert Form Beautiful Event

A walk in the spring sunshine, the shadowy depths of the Howard theater, and then real voices and an orchestra throbbing with the passion of Leoncavallo's tragic setting of the age-old story of Harlequin and Columbine—this was the program of an ideal hour or two Tuesday, set in the midst of work-day routine for the audience at the second opera concert, presented under the auspices of the Atlanta Woman's club, by Enrico Leide and the Howard orchestra, with a group of professional singers and Mrs. Earl Sherwood Jackson, leader of the book of the opera.

A musical treat of first magnitude, which was likewise a surprise feature, was the extra selection by the orchestra, the first movement of Shubert's unfinished symphony.

This work, one of the most beautiful in musical literature, and its very admirable and appreciative performance under Mr. Leide's baton, was a delightful thing in itself, and happily hushed the echoes of jazz, irreverently introduced this week into Atlanta's most beautiful theater, as a more than superfluous feature, where high standards of music have hitherto been maintained and have proved a great drawing card.

Features of Concert.
Outstanding features of the opera concert itself must include, first, a genuinely finished performance of the "Pavane" by J. Foster Barnes, a baritone with exceptional quality of voice and a method of handling it quite equal to that of many singers already established on the operatic stage.

Miss Frances Woodberry's singing of Nedda's charming aria, "The standard," and Byron Warner's singing was excellently in keeping with the high standard of the entire performance.

Mrs. Jackson had not only prepared an illuminating interpretation of the book of the opera, but her costumes were designed with similar truth to the character of the tragedy of Italian peasant life.

The opera next Tuesday will be Leoncavallo's "L'Oracolo."

banks: Harding did not want this paper discounted at the federal reserve banks. Mellon thought it made no difference whether the certificates were or were not discounted at the reserve banks.

A large part of the committee's time was taken up in wrangling. Interruptions were so frequent that many of the questions asked the officials were not answered. Democrats evinced hostility toward the republicans, because the latter had framed the bill entirely by themselves, and had only invited the minority members to join in the minority memorandum.

"Wait a minute, wait a minute, you're busybody," chairman Fordney told Representative Garner at one juncture.

"Nor Rain Checks."
Later Garner told Crissinger he took it that the latter did not favor issuing "paw tickets" to soldiers.

"Nor rain checks," rejoined Crissinger, explaining that he thought cash payments best.

This created some anger among the republicans.

"We're all entitled to our opinions," Crissinger remarked. "I'm not running the treasury department."

"Nor congress," said Representative Ford, pointedly.

"Nor congress," repeated Crissinger with a bow.

Crissinger said he had stated, as reported, that he would advise national banks not to make loans on certificates if his opinion were sought. Secretary Mellon had said he did not think such advice would be necessary, when asked if he "considered it incumbent" on the treasury to take such action. This prompted Representative Longworth to comment on the apparent divergence of views.

"Perhaps the secretary and I disagree," said Crissinger. "I didn't hear what he said."

Explains Objection.
Crissinger explained that his objection to the loan feature was based on the fact that large numbers of banks were loaned to the limit, and that because of conditions, they now held much paper which they would not be permitted normally to carry. Large amounts of non-negotiable collateral would make conditions worse, he thought.

Harding said that assuming the total amount to be borrowed would be $300,000,000, he did not believe the banking system of the country would be greatly burdened.

Secretary Mellon repeated his belief that the loan proposal would freeze credit, interfere with governmental funding operations, produce inflation, and virtually compel the banks to make loans on government security. Direct government loans, he thought, would be better.

Reaction to Follow.
He thought the bonus would stimulate business for the time being.

"But later on," he said, "there would be a reaction like that which came from the large wartime expenditures. The tendency would be to produce inflation."

Mellon repeated that a small tax on a broad class of articles—the sales tax—seemed the most desirable means to raise the needed funds.

"The certificates are not the sort of paper generally considered desirable for commercial banks," he said.

STRIKE INEVITABLE, SAYS MINER CHIEF

he reminded all parties that the threatened coal strike involved the interests of the public and is not a private controversy.

The public would look to the government for protection in the event of an emergency, the attorney-general added.

"I think it was a mistake on the part of the operators to hold out against a preliminary conference with mine workers," Mr. Daugherty declared. "There is a contractual relationship between the two interests. They agreed under terms of the 1920 scale committee to meet and discuss a new scale. They ought to do so, and it is fair to remind them that the government itself is a party to this contract and therefore has a right to take a hand in the business."

"Also all parties involved," the attorney-general continued, "might remember that the present dispute is not a private affair. The public is interested, and its rights must be protected by the government, as I think they will be in so far as may be possible."

Expressing the hope that the threatened strike would not take place, Mr. Daugherty added:

"I hope the strike will not take place, of course, but if it does those immediately involved must remember that the country must not be left without the fuel necessary to maintain transportation and essential industries."

The attorney-general made it plain that he was not taking sides in the controversy, but that it makes its voice heard through the government.

NO STRINGENCY EXPECTED HERE.
Atlanta's coal supply for the next sixty days is guaranteed from short-ages, regardless of the impending coal miners' strike and local dealers have signified their intention to stock up with a large surplus as a precaution against shortages after that date, it was announced Tuesday by Grover C. Miner, head of a number of the largest companies here.

Mr. Miner, at the instigation of the Atlanta Coal Dealers' association, completed a checkup on the amount of coal available in Atlanta at the present time and found that only a month's supply for Atlanta's needs alone is on hand. Assurance from all dealers that they would take advantage of the time remaining and stock up their yards with the maximum tonnage was obtained by Mr. Miner on his visit to the various coal yards.

It is not anticipated that the impending coal miners' strike will work a hardship on Atlanta and this section in view of the expressed attitude of the local dealers and the nearness of summer weather. At the most, it was stated, factories dependent upon coal for motive power will be protected for several months' period.

TWENTY-THREE DIE IN WINDSTORMS

which was reported from Kennet, Ark., where a 12-days-old infant was blown from a bed on which it was lying across the yard, here its clothing held it suspended to a picket-fence until the storm abated. The baby's parents, Mr. and Mrs. T. Woods, were seriously injured.

MANY INJURED AT CORINTH.
Corinth, Miss., March 14.—Twenty-five persons were injured, five of whom may die, and a swath a hundred feet wide through the southwestern part of the city was cut by a tornado which struck here shortly after noon today, leveling more than 150 homes in its path.

Wire communication south of Corinth is cut off, and it is feared that the list of injured and property damage will be largely increased by reports from outlying sections of this and surrounding counties.

The injured who are not expected to recover are Farmer F. Anderson; cashier of a bank, whose skull was fractured by a flying timber; J. B. Weeks, a Mrs. Grady, Will Gillen and J. E. Speers, superintendent of an oil mill, all of whom were hurt when their homes collapsed.

The tornado struck without warning, the storm moving in a north-westerly direction, leveling homes, telegraph poles and trees in its path. More than 150 homes inside the city limits are in ruins and many others are damaged.

Nearly settlements also report heavy storm damage, and a number of injured have already been brought into the hospital here. The home of Henry Crowe, a half mile from Corinth, was demolished, and his wife, Mrs. Edna Crowe, was caught in the ruins and probably fatally injured. His two little children were less seriously hurt and will recover.

Greatly a building of any kind was left standing in the path of the storm. The tornado passed within 200 feet of the central school building where almost a thousand pupils were gathered. The building was uninjured. The buildings destroyed are about equally divided between the homes of white people in the better part of the town and negro cabins in the outskirts. Almost all the injured, however, are whites.

Relief measures were promptly taken by the citizens and arrangements made to furnish all sufferers with food and shelter.

New York, March 14.—There now is an increased demand for steel products, although not so much for the heavy construction types. Independent steel companies are running from 50 to 55 per cent of capacity, and the United States Steel corporation exceeded 60 per cent, the highest since 1920. Of still greater significance has been the restoration in prices of steel products by the independent companies. These readjustments have not represented an advance in the general market so much as an end to the cut-throat competition of these companies which resulted in several of these concerns selling their products below the cost of production.

Carloadings have also shown an increase, and the first of the February reports of earnings of the railroads are showing increases. Of the large mail order houses, Montgomery Ward & Co.'s February sales show an increase of approximately $325,000, and while Sears, Roebuck & Co. have picked up somewhat, they have not made quite such favorable showings. However, the five and ten-cent stores, such as Woolworth's, Kresge, and others, also show increased sales for February. These are all indications of the gradual improvement in the business situation.

Railroad equipment companies are likely to be among the immediate beneficiaries of this recovery in trade. While there are about 450,000 idle cars reported, more than half of these are really unfit for service, so that any increase in railroad traffic will speedily absorb the available equipment. The prompt demands upon the equipment companies for new rolling stock.

In Excellent Position. These companies are in excellent position to finance such operations for they were not caught with large inventories as were many other industrial concerns, and having assets largely in cash have been able to take cash in the loan market, in some cases with more profit than in the actual operation of their plants. Any expansion in industry immediately feeds upon itself, so that whatever increase there is in agricultural prosperity will spread itself in every direction.

Unfortunately, there is another cloud on the horizon, the effects of which cannot be calculated at this time. It is the opposition that has developed in the senate to the ratification of the four-power treaty. This opposition is almost wholly a matter of partisan politics. The treaty itself is popular with the people and opponents of the administration think they see a way to get even with Senator Lodge, chairman of the foreign relations committee, who was, more than any other man, responsible for the defeat of the treaty of Versailles. All sorts of fantastic reservations are being offered, most of which declare that the treaty is not.

As to Negotiations. We have unfortunately a number of senators from the interior who seem to think it absolutely wrong for us to enter into negotiations with any other country on any subject. One senator from an eastern state gave as his objections that he did not believe this country ought to enter into an agreement with any country having an imperialistic form of government, which of course is absolutely absurd for it would mean that we adopted our form of government before we can negotiate with them. Some of the opposition comes from those propagandists who seem to have upon our having war with Japan. The whole opposition is exceedingly trying to those who believe that patriotic sentiment should be placed above partisanship.

Our refusal to enter the Geneva conference is no doubt disappointing to Europe. But it is a line which our policy of refusing to enter European politics. President Harding seems to think we can be of more help to Europe by remaining independent but in any event the sentiment of the country is against our active participation. Many think that the conference is really intended for the purpose of rewriting the treaty of Versailles or at any rate making more workable what may be the real secret of our refusal.

YOUR
WIN
ALL YOU CAN

- The puzzle game is open to any man, woman, girl or boy, except winners of any previous Constitution Puzzle Game, employees, or relatives of employees, of The Atlanta Constitution. It costs nothing to take part in the game.
- Answers must be written on one side of the paper only. You must also number each word consecutively, 1, 2, 3, etc. Do not write more than one "B-Word" with each number. Write your complete name and address on each page in the upper right-hand corner. Use a separate sheet to write anything else. Only English words found in the English dictionary will be accepted. Obsolete words will be considered incorrect. Either the singular or plural of a word may be used, but not both. Compound and hyphenated words cannot be used.
- "B-Words" of the same spelling can be counted only once, even though used in naming different objects. You can name each object only once; however, you may also name any visible part of an object.
- All lists of words must be mailed by March 25, 1922.
- The answer having the largest and nearest correct list of words beginning with "B" appearing in the picture, will win first prize, etc. Neatness, style and handwriting will not have any bearing in deciding the winners.
- Each answer received will be equally considered regardless of whether it is accompanied by subscriptions or not.
- "B-Word" participants may work together in answering the puzzle. However, only one prize will be awarded to any one household. Prizes will not be awarded to more than one of any number of people outside of the family, where several have worked together.
- The full amount of any prize tied for will be paid to each tied participant.
- The winners will be decided right after the close of the game, by three judges having no connection with The Constitution, and participants entering the game agree to accept their decisions as final and conclusive.
- The names of the prize winners and the correct list of "B-Words" will be published in The Constitution just as soon after the close of the game as possible.

Labor Is Told To Get 'Redress' In Elections

Washington, March 14.—A call to "labor and the masses" to "redress the wrongs" they have suffered since the armistice in the coming fall elections, has been issued by organized labor.

The executive committee of the non-partisan political campaign committee of the A. F. of L. has sent a proclamation to local committees throughout the country to make plans and adopt measures "for a most intensive campaign of education of not only members of trades unions but of the great masses of the people."

The proclamation was signed by Samuel Gompers, president of the A. F. of L.; Frank Morrison, secretary; and James O'Connell, president of the metal trades department.

Emphasis was placed on the need for placing candidates in the field where there appears in the primaries of neither party a candidate considered representative of the people's interests.

"The present deplorable condition of our country, artificially made, and in which labor and the farmers have been defeated until it hurts, has been ignored by congress," said the proclamation. "Only appeared for subsidies for ship owners, railroads and other interests find listeners. To all legislation in the interest of the people, congress is deaf."

The present campaign in the primaries and in the fall elections offers opportunities which may not come again in a decade.

"It is, therefore, important and necessary that not a moment should be lost in launching a most active campaign that will bring about the election of men and women who will restore to our people the rights taken from them since fighting ceased in the great war."

The matter was arranged. The next day's papers stated that Theodore Waters had fallen from a trolley car at Sixth and Walnut streets, and had gone to his sister's house, address given. At 7 o'clock the next morning the telephone bell began to ring and it was kept ringing at intervals during the day by ambulance chasers and lawyers who desired to take my case to court. At 8 o'clock they began to call at the house, and I spent a merry day being interviewed by runners who were sure they could secure me thousands of dollars if I would only consent to a suit against the transit company.

It was in vain that I contended I was not really hurt, that I was sure no ill would result from the accident. They knew better. You never could tell what the result would be, and they cited cases where persons who, having had an experience, had felt no ill effects for weeks and even months after an accident had occurred, but were then taken to the hospital and died, exactly as Silcox had intimated.

I remember one anxious little man with a roving eye, who gave me much fatherly advice as to my public duty in making a gramping corporation cough up as much money as possible. It being simply awful the way these corporations insisted upon gouging the people. Besides, I don't realize how badly I looked. He could see the effects of the accident in my face. I was fully clothed, but had on a dressing gown and sat in a Morris chair. He felt my pulse and also my forehead and told me I had a fever. Maybe I had, for I had been out to a newspaper man's party the night before. I asked him how he knew. He replied, rather self-consciously: "Ah, studied medicine myself for six months, once."

He went away at last, a much disappointed man, for I did not sign his paper, and it was curious to note his air of mystification. The idea! Here was a man with a chance to make a not of money out of a street car company who actually refused to take it. Evidently it was a new one on him.

A Hot Luncheon.
One splendid luncheon consists of a thick hot vegetable or cream soup, a sandwich with either egg, peanut butter or minced meat filling, a piece of fruit and a couple of small cookies. This makes a hearty, yet inexpensive luncheon that a child can study and grow on.

Perhaps, the most perplexing is the box lunch for children or the office person. One conscientious teacher watched the leavings from box lunches carried by her sixth grade pupils. She found one day, and bread that she estimated would have made fully twenty-five dainty sandwiches. The bread had been cut too thick and had plain slices of dry meat between, not even a little salt sprinkled on the meat.

The discovery is claimed by a California physician of rays obtained from electric current taken from an ordinary light socket that have the penetrative quality and medical value of X-rays.

Made-to-Order Damage Suits.

(From Leslie's Weekly.)
Some years ago, while investigating the profession of getting hurt, I expressed some doubt to the officials of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit company about the activities of the ambulance chasers as described by them.

"Very well," replied their chief executive, Hampton G. Silcox, now dead, "why not an accident yourself? Do as the fakers do. Step off a trolley car and roll over in the street. You will not hurt yourself if you are careful."

I will see that it is reported to the city hall. It will probably be published in the newspapers with your name and address. The ambulance chaser will do the rest."

The matter was arranged. The next day's papers stated that Theodore Waters had fallen from a trolley car at Sixth and Walnut streets, and had gone to his sister's house, address given.
